CRIMSON HAS EASY TIME WINNING FROM N.H.

Uses 3 Teams and Scores Five Touchdowns

By BILL GRIMES

Harvard Stadium, Oct. 14—Harvard's football machine displayed notable power as it ground out a victory over the fighting New Hampshire Wildcats before 15,000 fans here.

The Crimson attack was ragged in spots, but at times appeared very strong.

The final score was 34 to 0.

A chill wind swept through the Stadium, as the game started, and caused punts to take unexpected twists. Harvard scored in the first period after a punting duel between Dean of the Crimson and Hapbey of New Hampshire.

Thereafter the Crimson scored frequently.

FIRST PERIOD

Dean kicked off to Graffam, who was stopped on his own 22-yard line, and after one rush Hapbey punted to Locke, who was run outside on Harvard's 38. Following one short gain through the line Dean kicked to Graffam, who was

THE UNITED STATES will have a little "Devil's Island" of its own, much more secure than the French "Devil's Island," whence criminals escape often.

The Department of Justice will supply "devils" for the island in the shape of bad men, prison-breakers, kidnapers, and other hard characters.

The new "Devil's Island" is now a military prison on Alcatraz Island in San Francisco Bay. The 12 acres of island space are located on a high rock, with currents running swiftly all around. Nobody has ever escaped. Attorney-General Cummings says kidnapers and others sentenced for life will really stay in prison when they enter one of the 600 very safe cells on Alcatraz.

GERMANY BALKS LEAGUE, ARMS PARLEY

Berlin, Oct. 14 (INS)—Standing alone against the world, Germany today severed relations with the League of Nations and called upon the people of the Reich to affirm, by national referendum, their demand for armament equality with the rest of Europe.

Announcement of the bolt from the League, which to all intents and purposes automatically excludes Germany from further disarmament negotiations at Geneva, was made by Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda in the government of Chancellor Adolf Hitler.

Simultaneously with the announcement of the bolt, Goebbels made known that the Reichstag has been dissolved and that new elections will be held on Nov. 12, the day after the anniversary of the signing of the armistice, a "day of mourning" for Germany for the past 13 years.

The determined stand for the former allied powers at Geneva against the re-armament of Germany was responsible for the cabinet's decision to cast loose from Geneva.

FOLLOWS JAP LEAD

Under the terms of the League covenant, formal resignation from the League assembly cannot take effect for two years. The German bolt is the second major defection from the international organization formed through the efforts of the late Woodrow Wilson to ensure "lasting peace" to the world by international mediation.

FUMBLES MARK B. U. LEAD OVER COLBY 9-7

By WALTER KILEY

Nickerson Field, Weston, Oct. 14—A sensational 50-yard broken field run by George Pattison sophomore fullback who started his first game for the Terriers today, provided Boston University with a 7-0 lead over Colby College in the renewal of football relations after a lapse of six years here today.

About 2500 "Home-coming Day" spectators saw the 138-pound back take the ball on the receiving end of a lateral pass from Billy Whelton in the first period and elude the entire Colby team for the opening score. Tulis drop-kicked the point after touchdown.

A 30-yard off tackle dash by Louis Rancourt and a 33-yard forward from John Alden to Henry Davidson gave Colby a first down on the B. U. 4-yard line but the half ended with fourth down coming five yards to go.

In the 4th period Colby scored, B. U. was leading then 9 to 7.

FIRST PERIOD

Colby won the toss and elected to kick. Whelton received the kickoff on his own 10-yard line, and lateral passed to McNamara

So Jasper Didn't Get to Jump or Toot

Fort Lee, N. J., Oct. 14 (INS)—Jasper Gay, 31-year-old Negro harbor, is convinced today he will never get very far as long as policemen are permitted to interfere with experiment and research.

Attired in a flaming red swimming suit, Jasper went out to the middle of the George Washington bridge, over the Hudson, to add to the general knowledge of aerodynamics.

He carried with him:

Two footballs, to be affixed to his shoulders as waterwings.

A propeller, to be attached to his head.

Shoulder pads.

A whistle on a string.

But a bridge guard grabbed Jasper before he could leap from the span and turned him over to police, who held him on a charge of disorderly conduct.

The whistle, Jasper explained, was to be blown in case no one saw him after he jumped.

WALTHAM ARSON PLOT STARTS PROBE OF SCORE OF FIRES

GRAND JURY TO BEGIN INQUIRY NEXT WEEK

Peterson, His Wife by His Side, Arraigned; Is Held in $5000

Investigation of more than a score of fires of suspicious origin in Middlesex county was begun today by Inspector Everett W. Shumway under the direction of State Fire Marshal Stephen C. Garrity, as a result of the exposure of a fire-setting plot by Howard B. Peterson, Waltham businessman.

Inspector Shumway began his probe by conferring with Asst. Dist. Atty. Frank G. Volpe who has charge of the case against four men, whom Peterson named, and against Peterson himself, who is charged with being an accessory.

A special session of the Middlesex County grand jury on Monday to hear the case was called by Dist. Atty. Bishop.

Witnesses who will go before the grand jury will be interviewed at the district attorney's office at East Cambridge, Sunday afternoon.

WIFE STANDS BY

Mrs. Florence Peterson, who said she would stand by her husband in his trouble, did just that—publicly and courageously—today.

She braved the stares of the curious to accompany him to Waltham district court, where he answered to a charge of being an accessory to the burning of his icehouses.

Peterson, who is head of two ice companies and a leading figure in business and civic affairs in Waltham, pleaded not guilty to the charges. The case was continued to Oct. 27.

PLEDGES HER HOME

On the same date the four men whose arrest Peterson caused, by his confession of a fire plot, are due for hearing on charges of burning the buildings at destruction from Peterson.

"This defendant is ready to come in any time we want him," said Police Inspector Asa McKenna to Judge Michael J. Connolly. "I recommend $5000 bail with one surety."

This was agreeable to State Trooper Anthony Lacaire, who swore out the complaint, and Mrs. Peterson put up her house in Ellison pk., which she said was built for $17,000, was assessed for $10,000 and had no mortgage. She said a fair value of the house was $12,000.

REFUNDS INSURANCE

Mr. and Mrs. Peterson were in the courthouse before court opened and waited on a settee in the corridor with Atty. John J. Flynn, jr.

Peterson has made arrangements with the Globe Indemnity Co. to refund the insurance he collected after the fire amounting to $10,000.

Peterson claims the plot was hatched while his mind was clouded from drinking, and that afterward he was "shaken down" for $6500, on threats to kidnap his two sons.

Friends have come forward with offers to help him refund the insurance money, according to Atty. Flynn, but as far as can be learned, Peterson has not had to take advantage of these offers.

Courageous Wife's Love -:- Braves All

Howard B. Peterson and his wife, in the first posed picture of the couple since the wealthy Waltham business man bared the details of the arson plot in which he was enmeshed and which almost drove him to suicide. He was arraigned today, his wife bravely standing by his side, despite the stares of the curious. He was held in $5000 bail and she pledged her $17,000 as surety in order that he might be freed. HITLER TAKES HIS WOES TO AIR WAVES

Tells of Germany's Battle for Equality In Armament

Berlin, Oct. 14 (AP)—Germany, Chancellor Adolf Hitler said tonight in a speech to the world, is ready to go to the limit in disarmament, but the German demand for equality if other nations are to be armed, must not be sidetracked.

"If the world decides to remove all weapons to the last machine gun," the speaker said emphatically, Germany will fall in line, and the same applies to certain other categories of weapons. He warned, however, that if certain weapons are allotted to other powers, the German nation is not ready "to permit ourselves to be excluded therefrom as a nation of inferior rights."

ATTACKS VERSAILLES TREATY

In attacking the Treaty of Versailles, Hitler described its labors as slave work and then asserted:

"The German peoples are the most deeply convinced of their guiltlessness for the war.

"Let the other nations see to it that by the unnatural eternalization of the conceptions of the victor and the vanquished that there does not result an eternal inequality of rights."

In the wake of the treaty, the Chancellor said, came "an appalling collapse of the economic life to be followed by a not less menacing general and political collapse."

The speaker expressed the opinion that of all these affected by the treaty's results "Germany suffered the most."

"The Nazi revolution, the chancellor said, "had but one aim; to re-establish order for the creation of work and bread, and a proclamation of the concepts of honor, fidelity and decency as the elements of a moral order which cannot harm the other nations, but only bring a general boon."

Hitler then launched into a glowing glorification of the Nazi movement and its accomplishments to date, especially what he described as its overcoming of the unemployment problem.

"The German people themselves," he declared, "will prove to the world how solidly they stand behind the regime."

LIES AND SLANDER HE CRIES

"This world, however, to whom we are doing no harm, is persecuting us for months with a flood of lies and slanders."

Contrasting the German with the French and the Russian revolutions and with the Communistic experiments in Bavaria and Hungary Hitler said:

"Not a single show window was destroyed, no shops were plundered and no house damaged.

"Thousands of Americans, Englishmen and Frenchmen in these months visited Germany and could see with their own eyes that there is no land where law and order so prevail as in Germany, where private property are more righly respected, but where also a sharper fight conducted against the criminal element."

Then, with tremendous emphasis the speaker continued:

"The German people and the government have not demanded any weapons whatsoever, but equality.

"If the world decides to remove all weapons, to the last machine gun, we are ready to join such a convention immediately.

"If the world decides to destroy certain categories of weapons we are willing to renounce them.

"If, however, the world concedes certain weapons to such people, we are not ready to permit ourselves to be excluded therefrom as a nation of inferior right.

Hitler, in explaining why Germany was leaving the League, decreed:

"The men who today lead Germany have nothing in common with the said traitors of November, 1918.

"We, like every decent Englishman and Frenchman, did our duty by the fatherland.

"For us, as the representatives of an honest people and as honest selves, it is impossible to participate in the institutions under conditions possible only for dishonest men."

Hitler said he had learned that a real equality with other nations was not possible under the conference plans.

SOME BURNING QUESTIONS, BUT WHO WILL BE BURNT?

To the Editor of the Boston Evening American:

IT is almost unbelievable—and a little while ago it would have been quite unbelievable—that the Democratic Labor Party administration at Washington is seriously considering an investigation under the Blue Eagle as to whether Baby Leroy's salary in the movies is excessive or not.

The eagle must be fairly blue by this time, but it will probably get a good laugh out of that. The findings of the investigating committee will doubtless be embodied in an early edition of the Joe Miller code book.

Another thing that is solemnly under consideration at the headquarters of the Lenin experiment at Washington is whether certain especially competent directors and producers in the moving picture business should be allowed to make larger incomes than the President of the United States.

DID it ever occur to the Washington group of state Socialists now masquerading under the ancient and honorable name of Democracy that there are thousands of rich men in the United States who do nothing but cut their coupons from tax exempt securities whose incomes are many times greater than that of the President of the United States?

Why pick on the creative minds in a business which contributes so much to the enjoyment of the public?

Why attack those who in their few years of usefulness make money freely and pay taxes extravagantly and who earn the money they spend and earn the taxes they pay through hard work and creative genius?

If useful and successful men in various walks of life make more money than the President of the United States, why does not the Congress correct that anomaly by paying the President the salary he deserves?

Why complain of the creative kind of men who make business for the nation and make jobs for labor and who possess and employ for the common good the order of brains which have made America what it is, the leading nation of the world?

Do you think that the politicians made America great? You think that the labor people (God bless them—I have no quarrel with them) made the jobs they fill?

YOU know perfectly well that some creative mind had to devise an article or an instrument or a form of product before it could be manufactured and before labor could be employed on its manufacture.

The value of the creative minds is not what they do for themselves, but what they do for others. That is a great value and if the laborer is worthy of his hire the creative mind, which makes labor for the laborer, is worthy of its compensation, that the public may benefit.

And as for the politicians!

Have you ever thought that the ranks of the politicians are in the main made up of those who have been failures in every other line of endeavor?

The business men without businesses, the executives and sub-executives without jobs, the lawyers without clients or cases, all become politicians.

Think of the colossal impudence of these failures trying to tell the successful people of this great country how to run their affairs.

Ridiculous, to be sure, but just as surely calamitous in the end.

IN the meantime, after the burning question of Baby Leroy's salary has been satisfactorily settled, and after the problem of the useless coupon clippers and tax dodgers has been solved in the usual way by increasing the taxes on the tax payers and conveniently forgetting about the tax dodgers, and after the creative minds which have created America have been further taxed and further harassed and further hampered and eventually driven abroad to build business in some other country, in the meantime, I say, are we not to hear anything from a reform administration, a state socialistic administration, a demo-labor-union-crat administration about movie stock jobbing and movie stock swindling, about the public robbed of their earnings through false stock statements and manipulated market fluctuations in movie stocks?

Are campaign contributions immune from investigation?

Are the actual evils in the moving picture business to be overlooked while investigators ponder the matter of Baby Leroy's salary and while the failures in business, gone into politics, debate how they can drive the successes in business out of business and out of the country?

We have a big country and a strong, long suffering people and I guess we can survive anything. As a matter of fact, we have survived almost everything, including the perennial plague of politicians. So I remain,

Still hopefully yours,

A PLAIN AMERICAN.

DOLAN'S 7-CENT DEAL CAUSES WRANGLE

Federal Depositors to Demand Ousting of Receiver Pearson

Rumblings of protest against the seven-cents-on-the-dollar settlement effected for City Treasurer Edmund L. Dolan with the closed Federal National Bank began to take definite form today in a threatened demand for the removal of Herbert Pearson as receiver for the institution.

The same depositors who two months ago appealed to the federal comptroller of currency for the removal of John R. Cunningham as receiver of the Boston Continental National Bank today were preparing to take similar action against Pearson.

At the same time, Pearson declared that he was far from satisfied with the settlement with Dolan on the theory that the man who was considered a millionaire now appears to be almost a pauper. However, he said that he felt that a payment of $5886.71 by Dolan on a debt of $78,506, representing notes and stock assessments, was better than nothing at all.

BETTER THAN NOTHING

"The Dolan settlement was not satisfactory," said Pearson today. "It is a receiver's job to get 100 per cent, if possible, or as much as he can get under the circumstances. In the case of Dolan, we thought that $5,886 was better than nothing.

"I might have entered suit for judgement," he went on, "but that would have been expensive and probably would have eaten up some of that $5000.

"I must confine myself strictly to legal means. The facts are all in the court records and speak for themselves. There is nothing I can add. The Dolan settlement was approved by the United States comptroller of the currency and by the federal court as the records show.

"There are many elements in these matters that the public does not understand. It would seem that a receiver can never do anything that pleases everybody."

That incidentally, is an exact echo of Cunningham's complaint in his resignation as receiver for the Boston Continental.

Meanwhile there were numerous rumors that suit might be filed by depositors against Dolan—perhaps by the same persons who took action against Daniel Mulloney, president of the closed bank, and his wife just a week ago today.

There was also talk of a depositors' protest meeting in Roxsuli Hall, although—as far as could be learned—no definite arrangements have been made for this.

Dolan himself was satisfied today to have the public believe that he was "broke" rather than that he is worth upwards of a million dollars, which had been the popular impression for a number of years.

"It's merely a straight business deal," was the city treasurer's only comment on the matter. He was content to allow it to be interpreted however the public liked.

Although Dolan is said to be the owner of a costly yacht and a home on the Jamaicaway, he made a sworn statement that he was unable to pay a claim of $78,506 on notes and stock assessments.

It was learned today that the Dolan home is in the name of the city treasurer's sister. Employes of the bank receiver's office said that they knew nothing of the Dolan yacht.

NAZIS FREE U. S. ATTORNEY

Berlin, Oct. 14 (AP)—An American lawyer, Leo Gallegher, was released after three hours under technical arrest today after he and three other foreign attorneys had been excluded from the courtroom at the Reichstag fire trial.

The four were excluded and escorted out by police for writing a letter defending the attitude of Georgi Dimitroff, one of the five defendants, toward the court.

While the four were being taken to police presidency "for questioning," Arthur Garfield Hays, an American lawyer who was not excluded, got in touch with the American Consul General, George S. Messersmith.

Messersmith went to the police and found the men were not there but at the Reichstag building. When he reached there the men had been released.

Concord, Oct. 14—Judge Howard A. Wilson of Concord district court and Mrs. Wilson tomorrow will observe their thirtieth wedding anniversary. They were married in Maynard, Oct. 15, 1903, and have since lived in that town.

HEARING OPENS ON FENDERSON

Portland, Me., Oct. 14—Lloyd B. Fenderson, former treasurer of the closed Inman Trust Co. of Cambridge, a Federal National affiliate, sat nervously in court here today as the government began its attempt to return him to Boston, where he faces four indictments in connection with the closing of the Federal National Bank.

Attired in a dark blue business suit and accompanied by his wife, Fenderson fidgeted in his chair while Asst. U. S. Atty. Irving G. McCann introduced the four indictments—all charging misapplication of funds—in evidence before U. S. Commissioner Richard Gould.

The hearing was continued to Monday, Oct. 23, when Franklin R. Chesley, Fenderson's Boston lawyer, said it would take at least a day and a half to hear the defense.

The government contented itself with introducing the indictments and having Fenderson identified as the person named in them. This was done by John B. O'Leary, of Arlington, Mass., former assistant treasurer of the Inman Trust, and Philip McKeown, of Boston, an auditor employed by the receiver for the Federal National.

The hearing was marked by frequent clashes between the lawyers, especially after Chesley failed in attempts to have McCann appear as a defense witness and to force the government to bring to Portland the bank records.

Fenderson returned to his summer home at Biddeford Pool after his bail of $37,500 was continued.

Siamese Battling With Rebel Troops

Bangkok, Siam, Oct. 14 (AP)—Heavy fighting was reported in progress today between government and rebel troops on the outskirts of this city.

Artillery fire continued through the night and was still in progress this morning.

The rebels were reported retreating after sustaining heavy casualties.

CHANEY WIDOW MAY WED SOON

Los Angeles, Oct. 14 (AP)—Blanks for a notice of intention to wed Mrs. Hazel G. Chaney, wealthy widow of the late Lon Chaney, movie character actor, were obtained today at the marriage license bureau by John Jeske, the Chaney family chauffeur.

License clerks said Jeske told them he expected to marry Mrs. Chaney at her bedside in a hospital where she is reported seriously ill.

Jeske said he would seek permission from Mrs. Chaney's physician, Dr. C. G. Toland, but Dr. Toland said he would refuse.

Auto Bandits Rob Trio of Cash and Gems

A new crime wave struck Boston today, with armed robbers in automobiles sweeping through Roxbury, Jamaica Plain and Brookline and escaping with nearly $7,000 in cash and loot.

Police were proceeding on the theory that at least two of the robberies were committed by the same gang.

The first holdup reported was in Brookline, where the car of William M. Silverman, wholesale fruit dealer, was forced to the curb on Summit ave., and he was robbed of $4896.

Three men worked in this robbery, at least two of them armed, the holdup taking place in the Corey Hill section.

The next report was received from Daniel Shapiro and Miss Bernice Paskin of Brookline, who told police they were stopped apparently by the same robber trio on Glenrd. After being searched the couple were permitted to proceed by the bandits, who took nothing from them.

Within an hour another report was received that four cases of jewelry valued at more than $2000 were stolen from a parked motor car on Greenville st., Roxbury.

George C. Spellmeyer of 36 Lexington ave., Attleboro, salesman for an Attleboro jewelry firm, reported the theft to the police.

CAMPUS KILLER SUSPECT HELD

Northampton, Oct. 14—Charged with assault with intent to murder in connection with the robbing and slaying of Timothy L. Diggins, 23, on the Amherst College campus late Tuesday night, Edward Stanislewski, 20, of Amherst, was arraigned in district court here today and was held without bail for further hearing on October 21.

Stanislewski, who fled from his home following the robbery and murder, was arrested in Troy, N. Y., yesterday and was returned here by officers early today.

Diggins, a lunchroom attendant, was crossing the college campus on his way home. In his pockets were $55. Students heard the victim's screams as he was attacked by a highwayman and found Diggins dying, his pockets rifled.

Bus Driver Held on Hit-Run Charges

William J. Morony, Marlboro bus driver, was held by Brighton police today on hit-and-run charges growing out of unexplained abandonment on North Beacon st. of Edward C. Monahan, 50, of Eastman st., Dorchester, found lying by the roadside with a fractured skull.

Monohan, on the danger list at the City Hospital, told of riding with Morony toward Boston when their car collided with the rear of a truck.

Appearing today at the Brighton police station, Morony was arrested. His story did not satisfy authorities. He and Monahan work the same bus company.

Lynn Police Car Sent for Boy Hurt in R. I.

The Lynn police ambulance was sent to Providence today to get Arthur Parquette, 18, of Mall st., Lynn, who was injured when an alleged stolen car in which he was riding with another Lynn boy crashed into a tree while being pursued by Providence police.

The boy has a dislocated hip and will probably be transferred to Lynn Hospital. The accident occurred two weeks ago.

McLaughlin Quits as Fire Head, May Run for Mayor

Edward F. McLaughlin, Boston's fire commissioner for the last four years, resigned today, and in doing so hurled a bomb-shell that further scrambled the already kaleidoscopic Democratic mayoralty race.

Although there was not one word of politics in the letter of resignation the Fire Commissioner sent today to Mayor Curley's office, with the request that it be accepted immediately, it was not the surprise that it seemed to be.

Political observers have linked McLaughlin's name with the campaign for months, and he has never denied that it was his ambition to succeed the man who appointed him to his present office.

Today these same observers freely predicted that Daniel H. Coakley, member of the governor's council, would withdraw from the mayoral ring to make room for McLaughlin and has filed nomination papers.

Whether Mayor Curley would support his friend and political associate, however, remained an enigma. While Curley has not yet indicated whom he will support—or whether he will support anyone, it was felt that nothing short of a political miracle would induce him to support a candidate who also had the backing of Coakley, the mayor's political arch-enemy.

It was freely admitted that McLaughlin is able to poll many more votes in South Boston and Dorchester than Coakley or some of the other Democratic candidates. He would make heavy inroads into the Foley vote, it was felt.

The mayor, in his home in the Jamaicaway, when informed of McLaughlin's action, gave a Sphinx's answer, at least so far as its political significance goes. He said:

"This is the first intimation I have had that his private business required his full time. I shall send for him and discuss the matter with him on Monday. His service was most satisfactory, and his conduct in keeping with the best traditions of the fire department. Consequently, I desire to confer with him before accepting his resignation."

An even more surprising explanation of the fire commissioner's action, however, was advanced at City Hall this morning by some of his friends.

They declared that McLaughlin had split with Curley and that he would support Frederick W. Mansfield for mayor, while he expected Curley to support Foley. They attributed his resignation to his political rift with the mayor.

DICKSTEIN SEES NAZI FLOOD

New York, Oct. 14 (INS)—Charges that German aliens are being "dumped promiscuously" in Atlantic seaboard cities to spread pro-Nazi propaganda, were voiced today by Rep. Samuel Dickstein, chairman of the House Immigration Committee, on the eve of his departure for Washington to open an investigation into alleged Nazi propaganda efforts in the United States.

Dickstein said he had data to support his charge, "particularly with reference to the promiscuous dumping of Nazi agents." These, he added, were being brought to this country often in the guise of seamen or ship employes and slipped through immigration lines.

JESSIE'S RUN DOWN AIMEE'S TRAIL WAITS INSPIRATION

MRS. COSTELLO WILL STICK TO EVANGELIST

Slim Crowd of 2500 Sees Spotlight on Choir Singer

By PEGGY DOYLE

After witnessing her first revival from a seat in the choir, Mrs. Jessie Burnett Costello—Sister Jessie, now that she has joined hands with Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson (Nee Hutton)—has definitely decided to join the ranks of the sizzling sister from California.

Mrs. Costello, who only two months ago was cleared of a charge that she poisoned her fire captain husband, will in no way "steal the spotlight" for Sister Aimee, however.

That was the answer today to conjecture and what-not that grew from Jessie's appearance in Boston Arena in the role of choir singer and not an "added attraction."

The acquitted widow let it be known that preaching will be for Aimee and the lesser glamorous work on welfare for her.

The sizzling Sister from Los Angeles faced an audience of approximately 2500, in a holocaust that will hold four times that number, and performed her timeworn commercial miracle of making an audience seem ample and enthusiastic.

To school herself in the new work, Jessie will go to Aimee's headquarters of the Four Square Gospel Church at Los Angeles. Her definite date for starting has not been determined.

"REAL FEELING" WAITED.

The decision seemed to answer today the question as to whether or not Jessie intends—or will be allowed—to preach during the Aimee revival that continues until next Thursday. She will remain in the fold as a choir singer.

There is a strong possibility, however, that Jessie will "hit the sawdust trail" before the revival is ended. Just when that will happen, Jessie said, depends upon when she "gets the real feeling."

"I'd go up," she whispered at last night's opening, "but, honestly, I haven't got the real feeling in me to do it. If I had I'd go up in a minute.

"I don't feel like a convert right now. I am just a woman who wants to do welfare work in a real way. I did it all my life, anyway."

Jessie was first seated out of view, in a section reserved on the floor of the Arena for the choir. But she soon was called to the stage in a neat announcement by the California evangelist.

Declaring that the choir was too far away, the evangelist asked them, in her friendly voice, to come up and aid her on the stage. Jessie was in the choir and, by that expert manipulation of detail which built a $2,000,000 Hollywood tabernacle, she found herself at the extreme right of the stage, backgrounded by Aimee's secretary, Miss Mae Waldron, and very clearly available for the audience's view.

OUT OF SPOTLIGHT

In a twinkling, the flashlights of the newspaper photographers were giving the effect of a Gatling night bombardment. The focus was on the Peabody widow, too.

Aimee reached a high point in eloquence in her description—or was it explanation, or apology—of her $3000 appearance on the stage of a New York theater for one week.

"When I was summoned to this unusual task," said the evangelist, who happened to be wearing the same clinging, trained, angel-sleeved white satin gown, with diamente cross on the bodice, that she had had especially designed for her stage appearance, "I immediately sought counsel. I assembled a board of the Angelus Temple and I said to them, "Will I, or will I not—WILL I, or will I NOT—WILL I?"

JUST BETWEEN REELS

She told how deeply touched she was to find a great stained-glass window built into the stage as a background for her act and of the devout conduct of Broadway's charming riff-raff during her two-a-day exploitation. A reverential management put her between the feature picture and the news reel, and she was at no time threatened with an animal act or Japanese barrel missers.

"Oh, I was so happy, so happy," said Mrs. Semple, ecstatically.

Toward the end of the night's somewhat deserted proceedings, Mrs. McPherson called for that rousing old song, "Send a Great Revival," and it is the earnest hope of this writer that one comes along—although I ain't seen nothin' to that effect.

SILVER SHIRTS DRAW FIRE OF EDITOR WISE

Son of Famous Rabbi Brands Pelley "Nazi Opportunist"

Stopped dead in their attempt to sell Hitlerism in Massachusetts at $10 a head—largely through an exclusive expose by the Boston Evening American, William Dudley Pelley's Silver Shirts apparently have waged a more successful membership campaign elsewhere.

Now that they have enough numerical strength to plan a convention for Oklahoma City next month, the organization is beginning to draw the fire of those who would first be exposed to its indignities.

James Waterman Wise, editor of the Jewish monthly, Opinion, and son of Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York, today said that he had become greatly interested in the new movement and had sought out the former Boston newspaperman who is its head.

INTERVIEWS PELLEY

"When I heard about the Silver Shirts," said Wise, in speaking of his interview with Pelley, "I took the opportunity to observe the beginning of one of those mass movements of intolerance like the Ku Klux Klan by going to Asheville, N. C.

"Pelley struck me as an opportunist who is seeking to capitalize on the success of the Nazi movement in Germany. To do it he had to suddenly switch his magazine, the Liberator, from communication - with - the - spirit-world articles to articles attacking the Jews.

"Pelley told me the whole story of his life. He was a minister's son from Vermont. He became a newspaperman and a Y. M. C. A. secretary during the war. That took him to the Vladivostock front and left him an expert on Communism.

HEART STOPPED IN ILLNESS

"During an illness his heart stopped for seven minutes. He said an article on it in a national magazine, reporting in detail his look at the next world in those seven minutes. It was a big success. That gave him an idea. He started a metaphysical magazine.

"This was the magazine he switched into an anti-Semitic journal overnight. Before Hitler's success the magazine had never said a word against the Jews.

Jury Grills Detective on Bearse Murder Case for Hours

Barnstable, Oct. 14—While 21 newly-summoned witnesses cooled their heels in an anteroom, the Barnstable grand jury which is investigating the murder of Franklin L. Bearse last December in a clash between bootleggers and hi-jackers at Centerville, questioned State Detective Ernest S. Bradford for hours today.

The appearance of the detective before the grand jury was a surprise, even to Dist. Atty. William C. Crossley, who issued summonses last night for 13 additional witnesses. The inquiry will continue several days next week according to a statement by the district attorney this afternoon.

Among the witnesses waiting to be questioned was Warren Bearse, father of the victim.

HENIGAN RUNS TO SAVE BOY

James P. "Jimmy" Henigan, veteran marathon plodder, today ran—and lost—a race that threatened to prove disastrous for a time to a 13-year-old boy.

In his new role as Medford milkman, Henigan was just boarding the wagon at Lewis and Court sts., Medford, when the horse bolted. Herbert Barchard, 13, of Fountain st., Medford, clung to the seat.

Henigan clung to the reins for several yards but was forced to let go. He ran alongside, but the frightened animal outdistanced the veteran plodder.

Rounding the curve, the wagon turned on its side and the Barchard boy was thrown to the street. He suffered slight injuries and was taken home. The boy is a neighbor of Henigan's.

Roxbury Man Hurt in Taxicab Crash

Isadore Wise, 22, of 96 Magnolia st., Roxbury, was cut about the face and neck early today when a taxicab in which he was riding hit the rear of a parked truck at Albany and Oneida sts., South End. Wise was taken to the City hospital.

DR. OLIVER WEDS MISS COMBA

Milford, Oct. 14—Dr. Alfred Joseph Oliver, son of Mrs. Emma Oliver of Somerville, and Miss Anna Geraldine Comba, youngest daughter of Mrs. Annie S. Combs, were united in marriage this afternoon in St. Anne's Church in Wayland. Rev. Dr. Robert H. Lord performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate family and relatives.

Miss May Annunciata Comba, sister of the bride, and member of the Milford High school faculty, was maid of honor and the best man was Albert Charles Oliver of Somerville, brother of the groom.

Dr. Oliver is a graduate of the Milford high school, class of 1916, of Tufts college, where he received a degree of D. M. D., and is prominent in the social and fraternal life of this town, being a member of several organizations.

The bride is a graduate of St. Mary's Academy, Milford, and also attended St. Elizabeth's College at Convent, N. J. She is prominent in social activities and, with her mother and other members of her family maintained a summer home at Nantasket Beach for several seasons. Her father, the late Jeremiah J. Combs, was engaged in the wholesale leather business in Boston and New York city.

MARY F. CURRY IS BRIDE OF LYNN MAN

First National Stores Official's Daughter Wed in Dorchester

Outstanding among Boston's social events this fall season was today's wedding of Mary Frances Curry of Dorchester, and Philip Morris Cotter of Lynn. It was celebrated at 10 a. m. in St. Ambrose church, Fields Corner.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin C. Curry of 110 Belleville ave., Dorchester. Mr. Curry is first vice-president of the First National Stores. The bridegroom is a widely known insurance broker.

The maid of honor was the bride's sister, Nancy Curry. Another sister, Margaret, acted as bridesmaid. So did Mrs. James C. Curry, a sister-in-law, and Marion and Ann Cotter, sisters of the bridegroom.

Paul Cotter, a brother, was best man. Four other brothers, John Charles, Jr., Joseph and Robert, acted as ushers, as did three brothers of the bride, James, Joseph and Francis Curry.

The wedding was followed by a reception in the Hotel Statler, which was attended by some 400 guests.

The bride wore a Chanel model of antique ivory velvet with a three-yard train of Carickmacross lace. She carried lilies of the valley and orchids.

Details of police were assigned to the home, the church and the hotel to guard guests and gifts.

HULTMAN SEES LITTLE CRIME IN BOSTON

Blames the People for Leaving Autos Unlocked

You may be interested to learn that there is really little crime in Boston.

Police Commissioner Hultman says so.

You also may be interested to learn that prohibition really has not worked badly, and that the people who are fundamentally responsible for most holdups are those who leave their autos unlocked and their valuables unguarded.

So says the commissioner, and lest you doubt, here is his test for telling whether a crime wave prevails:

"The test is whether you can walk the streets and be practically safe. Almost anyone will agree that Boston streets are safe, day and night."

And it may occur to you that the robberies, for the most part, don't occur on the streets so often as in the banks and the stores, where, somehow or other, the gunmen figure money is.

Still, the holdups are more or less of a myth, anyway, it seems.

"We talk about a crime wave here—the newspaper headlines do—but, broadly speaking, there is really little crime in Boston."

Broadly speaking, mind you. It's great to be broad-minded and overlook the little pecadillos that bother the average citizen.

"If people generally were less careless, we would have far less holdups," said the commissioner. "They leave their valuables where they can be seen and identified. They park their cars without locking them.

Meanwhile, several Back Bay nightclubs, reported about to close because of repeated police raids, were said today to be only on the way to other sections of the city.

MAN JAILED IN PARDON FRAUD

Preying on the hopes of a Watertown man, whose son is serving a life term for murder in New Jersey, Louis Marchione, 48, of Leydon st., Medford, defrauded the father of $200, police charged today.

Police say Marchione told Salvatore Buccadora of Forest st., Watertown, that he knew the Governor and the right lawyers and could free his son, Antonio, who killed a man during a house robbery.

Telegrams from New Jersey to Buccadora, reporting the payment of $175 to lawyers, aided the alleged plot. Marchione was held in $1000 bail in Waltham court and the case put over until Wednesday.

Held as Tipsy Driver After Gunplay Chase

Arrested last night following a chase through North Station strut after one shot had been fired by a pursuing officer, Edward J. Redican, 28, Vassar st., Dorchester, pleaded not guilty in Municipal court today to driving while under the influence of liquor, driving without a license or registration and using an automobile without authority.

American 'Ad' Packs Store

The Wellworth Market, 2333-2337 Washington st., Roxbury, had to ask police assistance today in handling a record rush of customers, after the opening of the store had been announced in a full page advertisement in the Boston Evening American.

Week-end shoppers, thronging from all sections of Greater Boston, jammed aisles and entrances of the market early. When the store's 150 employes had been swamped with orders and when Washington st. traffic threatened to be tied up, Proprietor Louis Segal asked police aid.

A special detail of officers, hastily dispatched to the market, took charge of the situation. Customers were forced into waiting lines, and groups of 100 at a time were admitted in turn to the store's floor space.

Man's Back Broken in Auto Accident

Lowell, Oct. 14—James J. McCormack, 56, attendant at the City Hospital, was critically injured as his bicycle collided with an auto, owned by Mrs. Lucy Donnelly, of Rumford, Me., and driven by Norman J. Champagne of this city.

McCormack was taken to St. John's Hospital where surgeons said his back had been broken.

DOUGLAS PLANT BOOSTS WAGES

Brockton, Oct. 14—Immediate pay increases of 10 per cent to piece workers and 5 per cent to day workers are promised in a statement issued today by the W. L. Douglas Shoe Co., defending refusal to repudiate an unexpired contract with the Boot and Shoe Workers Union.

"Cash bonuses," equivalent to union dues paid during the weeks of the present shoe strike, were also promised Douglas Co. employes in today's statement.

The statement was issued in explanation of the Douglas company's refusal to join 14 other Brockton shoe firms in discontinuance of a rule requiring workers to be members in good standing of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union.

65-CAR BULLET JUMPS TRACK

Manchester, Conn., Oct. 14 (INS)—Twenty-five cars of the 65-car "Bullet," fast express freight train running from Portland, Me. to New York, were hurled from the tracks here early today and wrecked at the Oakland st. crossing on the Manchester-Willimantic line of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad.

Two locomotives were also piled up in the wreckage.

Several members of the train crew were injured, but only two, Engineer Carlson White of Hartford and Flagman James McCarthy of Rockville, were taken to a hospital.

Al Smith Too Busy to Aid Jewish Relief

He has announced he would refuse the post of high commissioner to aid German-Jewish refugees if the League of Nations offered it to him.

He has 13 jobs. He is president of the Empire State, Inc., editor of the New Outlook, chairman of the board of trustees of the College of Forestry of Syracuse University, chairman of the board of the County Trust Co., the Federal Broadcasting Corporation and of a coal company.

Also he's director of the New York Life Insurance Co., the Knott Hotels Corp., the Consolidated Indemnity & Insurance Co., the National Surety Corp., the Beekman St. Hospital, the Henry St. Settlement and the League of New York Theaters, Inc.

Hungry Man Collapses on Hike to Wife's Bedside

Allen Codell, taken to a Bridgeport, Ct., hospital today after collapse from hunger and exhaustion, will resume his New York-to-Boston hike to the bedside of a sick wife here "as soon as they'll let me," he told the Boston Evening American.

Broke and footless for two days, Codell, 28, and a North Reading resident, dropped unconscious by the roadside at Stratford, Ct., after having walked since Thursday night in an effort to reach Mrs. Codell, seriously ill at Massachusetts General Hospital.

"I went to New York to try to raise money on a little insurance policy," Codell said from his cot in an emergency ward at Hillside Home, Bridgeport. "My wife has been in the hospital for a month. We needed money. The insurance people wouldn't give me any cash. I was broke. Then I got a telegram saying my wife was worse. I started walking.

"That was Thursday night. I hadn't eaten. I didn't eat until I was brought here by police who picked me up at Stratford. I walked most of the way. One motorist gave me a short lift.

"If the Massachusetts state police or the Travelers' Aid Society will give me transportation home, I'll pay them back every cent. If they don't, well, I'm still game to walk. I've got to get to Boston, and I'm going.

"My wife and I ran a little roadside stand on the state road up at North Reading. I live in the back of the stand."

Boston state police headquarters said no money was available to help Codell. North Reading state police barracks, however, received a call from an anonymous friend of the Codells, who said he would wire transportation money.

At the hospital, Mrs. Codell, suffering from acute asthma, was reported severely ill but not on the danger list. She was not told of her husband's collapse.

'CLOSED' CLUBS STILL RUN

Those four clubs in the Back Bay which Police Supt. Martin H. King thought were going to close up for him, must be in another city.

For this afternoon came reports from behind the barricaded doors of two of the establishments that not only do they refuse to close down, but have told the superintendent so.

The three other clubs intimated that they "might" close down, but didn't seem to warm up to the idea.

Autos Lead Bullets in Killing Officers

Autos have caused the deaths of more policemen than gangster bullets in the last ten years, according to the latest report issued by the governor's committee on street and highway safety.

Seven Boston police officers have been slain by bandits since 1922, the report states, while six have died after being struck by motorists.

GERMANY DEFIES WORLD, BOLTS FROM LEAGUE

assembly because of the world powers' opposition to her activities in Manchuria and their refusal to take her side in the conflict with China.

Goebbels' announcement, a veritable bolt from the blue, was made to representatives of the German and foreign press only a short while after telegrams reached here telling of the latest stand of the former allied powers at Geneva.

Summed up by Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon of Great Britain, the allied heels flatly rejected Germany's demand for immediate rearmament and provided for an eight-year period of gradual transformation of the present world armies into "defense" forces.

EQUALITY—IN 8 YEARS.

Sir John expressed Britain's willingness to grant Germany equality at the end of this eight-year period.

This proposal was examined by the Hitler cabinet and found entirely unacceptable.

Sir John's speech was examined at length by leading figures in the government in a series of conferences. President Von Hindenburg and Chancellor Hitler talked the situation over with Foreign Minister Baron Konstantin Von Neurath and with Dr. Rudolph Nadolny, German delegate at Geneva.

Their verdict was that the situation was hopeless and that further negotiations would be a waste of time.

They came to the conclusion that the Reich, ground down under the terms of the treaty of Versailles and still "outlawed" in international negotiations by the heritage of the World War, was confronted by a "solid hostile bloc" at Geneva.

ONLY ONE COURSE

They decided that her "righteous claims to equality" had cruelly been swept aside despite solemn promises made to her by the former allies in December, 1932, and that the only course left open was to expound national indignation and independence by casting loose from the league.

The government, Dr. Goebbels said, hoped against hope that the United States would remain aloof from Europe in the event of conflict which months ago began to shatter the structure of apparent peace created on the continent.

But when Germany found that Norman H. Davis, American expert at Geneva, was in sympathy with the allied opposition to German rearmament, the Reich saw that the "game was up", he added.

Up to last night Baron von Neurath remained hopeful that some way out of the impasse might be found, permitting him to return to Geneva with Nadolini and continue negotiations.

FOR BETTER OR WORSE

But the other members of the cabinet could interpret such a move as nothing but surrender and concluded that Germany must cast the die for her own self-respect and for better or for worse.

By dissolving the Reichstag and calling the plebiscite on the arms issue, Chancellor Hitler feels he will have the entire Reich behind him in his decision to quit Geneva.

This step was interpreted as meaning that the government is more confident than ever before of its strength among the masses and feels sure it will obtain an overwhelming majority.

President Von Hindenburg is expected to follow Hitler's radio speech with a proclamation announcing his firm support of the Chancellor's epic decision.

An official proclamation reaffirming Germany's desire for genuine disarmament was issued here this afternoon shortly after the announcement of the Reich's withdrawal from the league.

French Call the Break Gravest News in 20 Years

Paris, Oct. 14 (AP)—A French spokesman today characterized the announcement of Germany's intention to withdraw from the Disarmament Conference and the League of Nations as "the gravest news in 20 years."

The news was flashed to the cabinet while it was in session discussing the armaments situation.

A foreign office spokesman commented as follows:

"France has done what she could in behalf of disarmament. Her views are shared by the United States and Great Britain, and now it is perfectly clear where Germany stands."

Doan's PILLS

A DIURETIC FOR THE KIDNEYS

Britain's Prosperity And War Debt Policy

ENGLAND'S attitude toward her debt to the United States—a debt which she is unwilling, not unable, to pay—calls for plain speech.

Not because she persists in trying to avert the discredit of her defaults of interest with the transparent artifice of "token payments"—paltry sums on account, nor because of her unceasing effort to obtain a remission of the principal of her obligation, notwithstanding its great reduction through the voluntary action and prodigal generosity of the United States.

The thing which calls for outspoken comment at this moment is the new evidence at hand of the insincerity of England's whole attitude toward her debt and the disingenuousness with which she treats the United States, notwithstanding our patience and indulgence as a creditor.

What business has this British commission, headed by Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, to come to Washington pulling a poor mouth and trying to trade on our needs and the depression which prevails at the moment in this country, to put through a bankrupt's composition with the United States, when England is boasting that she is THE LEADING FINANCIAL COUNTRY OF THE WORLD?

* * *

THERE is no financial or industrial leader of greater authority in England than Walter Runciman, now president of the board of trade, an important post in the British cabinet. He is also a director of the great Westminster Bank, with its branches throughout the kingdom and on the continent of Europe, a leading ship master and owner, and now and for many years past a member of Parliament.

In a speech delivered to his constituency on Wednesday of this week, he boasted of England's stability, her regained credit, now buttressed by the greatest amount of gold she has ever in her history possessed. He recited how England was regaining, IN EVERY DIRECTION, her old position as a great world trader.

"By contrast with 1931, said Mr. Runciman, "when we were almost on the financial rocks, we have now attained the position of being the STRONGEST FINANCIAL COUNTRY IN THE WORLD, with THE BEST CREDIT, and we have been able to place OUR NATIONAL FINANCES upon a FOUNDATION almost AS SECURE AS BEFORE THE WORLD WAR."

In his joyousness he could not forbear a dig at President Roosevelt as "the greatest autocrat in the world, who has chosen to make a huge experiment which might prove successful if the United States were a little world all its own."

"But it (United States) is also involved," said this boastful Briton, "in foreign trade, in which it cannot compete with the rest of the world."

* * *

AND one, perhaps the chief reason, for our handicap in competing with England for world trade is that England, by her default as a debtor, has shifted the burden of paying her huge war borrowings from the United States upon American industry and the American tax-payer, where it is reflected in the higher production cost of every article of commerce made in this country.

We loaned England in the darkest years of the war between four and five billions of dollars to save her from collapse as a belligerent and overthrow as a nation.

We did not attempt to take advantage of her needs as England seems quite eager to do, now, of ours. We were straining our power to its limits to aid her and to save her.

Later, before she reached the sturdy and affluent position of which Mr. Runciman now speaks so vauntingly, when her trade was languishing and unemployment threatened her with civil disorders, we voluntarily reduced this great debt by approximately fifty per cent.

What has she paid on account of the principal of her indebtedness? Less than FOUR PER CENT of what she borrowed!

It is reported that the commission now in Washington is being received coldly. Can anyone be surprised?

* * *

THERE is something radically at fault in England's attitude and in her approach to this far-reaching question of her war debt to the United States.

It is not pleasant to employ the only words which would properly characterize British policy with reference to the debt. We forbear to speak them.

But we rely upon the administration's spokesmen in Washington to convey to the British commissioners, and through them to the British public, how thoroughly England's attitude is understood in this country, how profound is the disillusionment throughout the United States as to English faith, and how transparent it is to American eyes that England is building prosperity upon her defaults as a debtor, and is willing to become strong by disabling a competitor with the burden of her own callously disavowed obligations.

U. S. TO BLAME GERMANY FOR ARMS BREAK

Washington, Oct. 14 (INS)—Secretary of State Hull today indicated that the United States will hold Germany responsible for the breakdown of the Disarmament Conference as the result of the Hitler regime's decision to bolt the League of Nations.

Expressing the great disappointment and serious regret of this government at Germany's action, the secretary said it hardly would slow down and possibly halt the entire disarmament movement.

The U. S. for some time, Hull said, had had one paramount object in view regarding disarmament. This has been to observe and practice teamwork in every feasible way with the other 54 nations to achieve disarmament. One of its special objectives has been to avoid just such an occurrence as has happened, Hull added.

American Viewpoint Blamed for Action

Geneva, Oct. 14 (INS)—American adherence to the British eight-year disarmament plan, which Berlin torpedoed, was paramount reason for Germany's withdrawal with the League of Nations, was announced here today by Norman H. Davis, American disarmament expert.

The American position, Davis said, especially the provision which endorses the thesis that "qualitative equality of armaments should be sought by the reduction of the arms of heavily armed powers and not through other nations attempting to build up inferior arms."

"This," he said, "cannot be achieved in one stroke."

"I am confident," he continued, "of the sincerity of purpose of the more heavily armed countries to take effective measures to make disarmament a reality.

"I would dd that no treaty could be satisfactory to my government or justify our participation in a system designed to ensure faithful observance unless that treaty contains precise provisions, such as means of disarmament."

FOLEY HOLDING TO LEAD OVER MANSFIELD

Dist.-Atty. William J. Foley resolutely held his commanding lead today in the Straw Ballot Test Election for mayor of Boston.

Frederick W. Mansfield, with grim courage, raced along behind him, striving desperately to close the gap that separates them.

They outstripped the field, leaving the host of mayoralty aspirants far in the rear as the new flood of ballots poured into the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

The registered Democratic voters of Boston have now cast a total of 18,603 postcard ballots in expressing their choice for next mayor of Boston. This is 10 per cent of the 180,000 who were registered as Democrats.

Interestingly enough, it was the same lead that Foley had attained prior to Columbus Day. They received identically the same number of votes over the holiday, in evidence of the breakneck race between them as they gallop farther away from the field.

Former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell brought up in his third place in the new count of votes. He is embedded in that position, outranking all the other aspirants, and the breach was again widened between him and the two leaders.

liver oil to your chickens," and tells of hens that laid $125 worth more eggs, when fed cod liver oil, than were laid by an equal number of hens without cod liver oil.

Breeders of race horses have for years been mixing cod liver oil with the feed of race horses, particularly mares and young foals in winter, when there is a lack of sunshine.

The same learned Dr. Holmes announces that a new substance, condensation of oil from the liver of the halibut, that contains 9200 times as much vitamin A as the ordinary cod liver oil. A small swallow of that should make hens lay copiously.

Mr. Rockefeller's investigators, looking into the question, "What shall be done after prohibition goes?" believe wise taxation of liquor should yield $700,000,000 a year.

Government agencies that "own and operate bridges, tunnels, irrigation projects, power developments, shipping, and a dozen other things," might well own and operate liquor dispensaries.

It must amuse the Jews to hear that they should not be permitted to settle in what was originally their own country. As well forbid Scotchmen to go back to Scotland.

This proud government, once absolutely out of business, believing it was told about "the government that governs least governs best," is now in business with a vengeance. It is in the pork business among other things, and it recently purchased 5,000,000 pounds of pork to help farmers, and will give the pork to the hungry.

F. H. LaGuardia, one of several running for mayor in New York, informs a cheering crowd that he has arranged with the government to give beef instead of pork to those that do not like pork.

Clothing the naked and feeding the hungry is no longer a simple business.

Your wobbling dollar rose in value yesterday to 68 cents, in the opinion of European money dealers. Our government's recent "conversion" of $1,875,000,000 worth of Liberty bonds, convinced them there is "no danger of dollar inflation." The dollar may go to 68 cents or back where it was, at about $1.68, if the government continues its policy of "dollars few and precious." But the prosperity of Americans generally will not go up correspondingly. If the government doesn't make money more plentiful there will be trouble in this country, and trouble for the government; such as neither has yet seen.

Gail Witnesses Custer's Brigade Sweep Forward With Bands Playing, Flags Waving

(Republished from Cosmopolitan Magazine and soon to appear on the screen as a Cosmopolitan Production, made by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and starring Marion Davies.)

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

Since Gail had been awakened by the guns, carbine firing also had been audible far away to the westward. Now, as an orderly brought around her horse, the noise of the rather ragged fusillade had increased. It sounded to her like Spencer carbine fire; and the scout, Babcock, who came cantering up on his celebrated horse, Gimlet, said that it was Sheridan's cavalry carbines making all that racket.

"It's going to be a fight or a foot race," he said gayly. "God help them; they run they're done for."

The weather was still lowering, with brief gusts of rain.

Babcock rode with her a little way along the White Oak road. But that was no place for them, they were shot at; and they whirled their horses and ran them hard through the woods to the Dinwiddie road, and then swerved all the way to Mrs. Gillian's house. Here the fields, meadows, thickets and woods swarmed with mounted Union cavalry deploying to the northward. Their yellow-welted jackets made a moving tide of blue spreading over the west, brown world; the rattle of their Spencer carbines was incessant.

Babcock galloped over to join a knot of Col. Sharpe's scouts and couriers. Boyish Gen. Merritt and his staff, mounted, were out in the cleared land on a knoll, and Operator 13 rode over to report her presence and mission, and to ask for Gen. Custer.

Merritt, young, smooth shaven, courteous, was much interjed; he questioned her minutely, turning in his saddle to look back at Babcock's scouts.

"Gen. Custer," he said, "is facing the Rebel cavalry of W. F. Lee, Pegram's guns, and the infantry of Corse and Mayo along the White Oak road. It's rather desperate for us unless Warren's Fifth Corps moves up."

"You'd better go ma'am, and explain about the importance of stopping any Rebel attempt to rush through. Say that I understand it thoroughly. I'll send Campbell as liaison."

"Very well, sir."

She turned and signaled to Babcock with her gloved hand, and he put his company of scouts in motion.

Merritt returned her quaint salute with smiling elegance, and she cantered forward into the woods, where she could see the red-and-white in line of battle.

Overhead, the Rebel shells were tearing through splintered branches. She halted Babcock and guidons of Union cavalry mounted its scouts behind a tobacco barn at the wood's edge, then cantered her horse toward the headquarters of another troop, where she could see mounted officers looking northward through field glasses.

One of these was an extraordinary looking and very young general officer dressed in a new uniform almost solidly overlaid and embroidered with gold. He had red-gold hair and a golden-yellow moustache, a long, thin, clever nose and a pair of deepset eyes of fighting blue.

At the moment young George Custer was feeling boyishly gay, humorous, mischievous. "You belong on Fifth ave. and in silk petticoats, ma'am," he said to Operator 13. "Pray tell me what you are doing out in the Virginia backwoods?"

They both laughed; she discharged her mission briefly; the boy general understood.

"I don't think they'll rush us," he said, "though Fits Lee is in front of us and there's no knowing. If they don't we'll just have to hold them until Warren goes in. If they come at us, and some squirm through, point out those two men you want me to attend to—if you can. Of course, I'll have them closed till we run them down, anyway, but show us those two scouts if you recognize them."

"I have John Babcock and some of Col. Sharpe's scouts over there by the tobacco barn," she ventured, "I thought I'd better have them here under the circumstances you mention."

"That's the thing to do, ma'am. But there'll be no rushing at us today, nor after dark, either. I expect to have a good sleep at Boiseaun's house. You'd better, too. I'll turn out anybody but Gen. Sheridan for you," he added, laughing.

But she thought it better for her and her scouts to remain at the extreme western end of the line of battle; and she told him smilingly that the tobacco barn promised palatial quarters.

One of his regiments had now dismounted, and the racket of their carbine volleys became deafening.

When the drenched world around her had grown entirely dark the firing ceased. Eastward, lanterns of the ambulances glimmering. Now and then a rocket soared, bursting softly into fire.

The girl slept, bridle in hand, huddled wretchedly on her log. Later, an orderly roused her to her horse. She ate her ration, uncooked, and lay down in the tobacco barn among the scouts. All night long, from an infinite distance, came the booming of great guns, slowly timing the solemn funeral cortege of a dying Confederacy.

Merry flurry of bugle and trumpet peal before dawn. On the Cramp road Custer, glittering like a golden lizard of the tropics, joyous amid his jesting staff; east of him, boyish Wesley Merritt in grave combat with Fitz Lee. A sudden banging from Rebel field batteries; shells shrieking high again over her head—then to sweep through Warren if he were already on the march. He was not.

A saucy staff officer came said to Operator 13, while she was washing her face in the brook: "Richmond is taken, ma'am!"

"Really?" said the girl; and added: "I'm sorry today is April first, aren't you?"

The April Fool rode off, abashed, and the lounging scouts laughed at him.

But Babcock said: "It might have been true if Warren had come up last night. I saw Campbell a few moments ago. He says Sheridan is in a rage with Warren, and damning and cursing around. He's coming out from, too. You'll see fur fly today, ma'am."

About seven in the morning blue-overcoated infantry began to arrive on the Five Forks road, and there was a great outburst of bugle calls everywhere.

Campbell, cantering up, said to Operator 13, who was just getting into her saddle: "All of Custer's cavalry bands are playing. He believes in music. Grand, ain't it, ma'am?"

At that moment Custer's line of battle swept into view magnificently, with all its brigade bands mounted on gray horses—trombones, trumpets, clarions, key bugles, hauthoys, cymbals and kettle-drums—playing . "Nellie Bly." Both men and horses appeared electrified by the stirring stimulating music.

It was a superb sight—Sheridan's line of battle, stretching from Boiseau's house eastward as far as the eye could see. Above them their forked colors, regimental standards and red-and-white guidons fluttered in the April wind; the polished brass instruments of every mounted band glittered and flashed; thousands of beautiful horses tossed impatient heads; thousands of blue-jacketed horsemen, carbines poised, moved slowly, steadily northward.

The battle rages as Operator 13 rides with Custer. Monday's installment will be intensely interesting.

Weight of Woman Bars Non-Support

Appearing before recorder J. Semple on a non-support charge her husband said: "When I married my wife three years ago she weighed 105 pounds, now she weighs 180 pounds. Do you call that non-support?"

Recorder Semple looked at Mrs. Ouilette and dismissed the case.

FOOD MIXING IS BARRED UNDER HAY DIET

By PEGGY DOYLE

In yesterday's discussion of the Hay Diet, there were presented the types of protein food available under the provisions of this health-ful ritual. It is possible that in reading over those items, the prospective experimenter felt the dawn of restriction in the absence of bread, potatoes and other fattening and much loved foods.

Today's list will undoubtedly raise the spirits of the harassed dieter, for here are included nearly all the things that other diet engineers have barred from time immemorial. Briefly, you can have your bread and spuds and keep your waistline slender if you will follow Dr. William Howard Hay's directions.

All you have to do is to avoid mixing any item of food included in today's list with any item of yesterday's list at any one meal.

HEALTHFUL FOODS.

These foods, presented today, include countless notorious troublemakers in the food field. It is the contention of Dr. Hay that their mischievousness depends entirely upon their being eaten with foods that do not combine them with protein food at a single sitting, you can have all these delicacies served without the slightest ill effects.

The foods to be avoided, when the Hay Diet is being observed at a meal, are all the proteins fully listed in yesterday's (Friday) issue of the Evening American. If you have missed that list, and it is most important, send to the Boston Evening American for a back copy of that issue.

For those who are not already informed with the principle of the Hay Diet, it can be briefly explained that the basis of this much-discussed theory is that protein and starch foods are incompatible and should never be eaten at the same meal.

According to Dr. Hay, such discrimination leads to a proper balance of acidity and alkalinity. Alkalinity is a synonym for life, spirit, vitality and health. Its opposite, acidity, which is attained by improper admixture of foods, is synonymous with sluggishness, indifference, illness and death.

In the fewest words, the separation of foods is a division into two main classifications—carbohydrates, such as bread, cereals, all products of grain, starch roots, sugars and sweets, fruits of every kind, and the other group—protein—comprising meats, eggs, fish, cheese and other forms of flesh food, no less chicken or lamb than beef or pork, for all have the same ratio of about 18 per cent protein.

At the moment it seems of first necessity to list the various kinds of carbohydrate foods which, with yesterday's list, is the basis for healthful and completely valuable diet.

NON-STARCHY VEGETABLES

Here they are:

Artichokes, bananas, bread (whole grain), cereals, (whole grain), corn, (when young and very tender in full milk may be used as a vegetable, but should be eaten only in July), dried beans (whole), peas, (dried split), popcorn, both Irish and sweet potatoes, pumpkin, unpolished rice, spaghetti (whole wheat), and winter squash.

Sugars that may be eaten at the same meal with the above-listed carbohydrates or starches are:

Dates, figs, honey, ice cream, molasses, maple syrup, raw-raw, tripe), raisins (raisins and mushrooms may be combined with all foods), sugar, (unrefined), sweets, (unrefined), and syrups, (unrefined).

The following vegetables, which are non-starchy and alkaline forming, may be combined with either the starch or the protein foods listed above:

Asparagus, beans (fresh green), beets, beet tops, Brussel sprouts, broccoli, cabbage, carrots, cauliflower, celery, corn (sweet first day picked), cucumber, dandelion, egg plant, endive, kale, leek, lettuce, okra, olives, onion, oyster plant, parsley, parsnips, pepper, pimento, salsify, sauerkraut, spinach, string beans, summer squash, tomatoes, turnips, vegetable salad and water cress.

The following fats may be combined with either the starch or protein meals:

Animal fats, fat bacon, butter, cod liver oil, cream, egg yolk, lard, oily nuts, olive oil, peanut oil and vegetable oil.

A further article on the Hay diet will appear in Monday's Boston Evening American.

CORSETIERE DIVULGES SOME SECRETS -:- CLOSE YOUR EYES TO LIFE'S BUSY WHIRL

Fashions Go On New 'Silver Standard'

By Victoria Gaines

"WHAT WOMEN WANT in a corset is a corseted look, but an uncorseted feeling." That's what one of the best corsetieres in town told us over the luncheon table the other day—and she should know! Because she's said to be a wizard with difficult to fit figures. She says she does this by molding the figure instead of compressing it—by spreading the surplus flesh to give a slim effect, instead of squeezing it.

How she does this is too complicated to explain here—but it has something to do with the skillful use of elastic gores at strategic spots. Women with large diaphragms and heavy thighs are her pet problems, she finds, since large hips or backs can be flattened much more easily than waists or thighs.

About Brassieres, Too

Brassieres also come within her sphere, since the brassiere is as much a part of the modern sheath silhouette as the corset. And here the corsetiere reigns supreme—because, while other overweight portions of, the body can be reduced by diet and exercise, nothing can be done about a heavy, sagging bust, except to get a good brassiere!

She has several "tricks of the trade" for giving that high, youthful bustline that every woman wants nowadays—one of which will uplift the most depressed bust without crowding, as most ordinary uplift brassieres do. Instead of a heavy and bulky, though high, contour, this gadget gives youthful dividing line between the breasts. And what she can do to fill out a flat-chested figure!

Usually it's this type of woman, too, who has heavy hips, which look all the larger by comparison with her flat chest.

And did you know that drooping bust muscles have a tendency to drag down all the muscles of the face and neck as well?—so that many a drawn neck and chinline can be corrected merely by wearing a well-fitted uplift brassiere! That's another secret that this very clever corsetiere told us!

"Silver Standard"

Three "silver standard" Paris fashions that have taken the town by storm are Mainbocher's daytime dress with the silver lame gilet set into the ruched V-neckline—Lanvin's frock with the silver lame yoke and lower sleeves—and Mainbocher's famous dinner suit of black wool with the silver metal cloth blouse and sealskin sleeves. These three have been seen in every fashion show and in every shop window, and will probably be sitting at the next table when you drop in at your favorite tavern. So hurry up and get them first!

Fashions—Sound Effects

Seen and heard between bites at a popular theatrical lunching place was Francine Larrimore, blonder than ever in blue velvet—coat-dress, jockey cap and gloves—all of the same bright blue shade.

("What did you think of that preview last night? It's all right—can tell me—I wasn't even in that picture!")

("Well, I didn't think it was so hot, myself, but it'll make money all right. Cost a song to produce, you know—only $200,000!")

Everyone's in town these days! There goes Pola Negri, in another black wool suit with black caracul collar and border.

("Who's so-and-so carrying the torch for now? It's all over? Well, he'll have another heart in about an hour!")

Helen Menzken in black velvet and pearls—a perfect setting for her fair complexion and auburn curls.

("Well, of course, I think she's a grand gal, too, but I could never go for her type myself!")

("Want a piece of that new show? I can get you in on a quarter of it for only $2500!")

WHERE CAN I BUY IT?

The Fashion Department spends much of its time constantly shopping for you. The merchandise discussed on this page can be purchased in Boston. For information regarding it, please telephone or write Margaret Mntson, Boston Evening American.

Bridging It—What I've Heard

By Barbara Hagen-Burger

NOT WALTER WINCHELL'S Orchids were those on Mrs. Charles Bean's becoming black dress—rather a tribute from a daughter to a mother frequently seen in Bridging Circles, well known to her out-of-town classes and for her in town playing.

A motion made and seconded is a recommendation to Mr. Winchell's ORCHID LIST. If he is still sending floral compliments we think some one should tip him off about the good work done by Mr. Nathan Kelley since his command at The Boston Chess Club. And as usual one can find a large gathering of the best players there.

There is SOMEHING NEW UNDER THE SUN. Manufactured by the Red Lion Cabinet Co., in Pennsylvania, we do not understand why they are so bashful about letting the public see their new bridge masterpieces. It is strong and well-proportioned. It comes in a color range to harmonize with the most modernistic home and is so completely good in itself that it is an asset whether your house is old or new. If it does not seem to fit in with your scheme we would say to get a new house.

I am writing of a DUPLICATE CARD TABLE. Lady, Lady, you will not have to buy new tables and new boards for this comes all in one. A regular table with four trap doors opening on its surface at your command to reveal four cigarette-box like cages with 16 compartments for 16 different hands.

Marriage and Sensible Maidens

By HELEN ROWLAND

Helen Rowland

MAE WEST may have brought petticoats back into favor—but those dear, dead days of the perfumed mauve decade, when men were "gents" and girls were credulous, will never again return!

* * *

About the only thing a modern girl seems to learn by getting married is what sort of man she DOESN'T want to marry "next time."

* * *

Men seldom fall in love, and are really "lured" into it. Most of them are merely shoved into it by chance, fate, accident or "the girl before the last."

* * *

Many a marriage has been preserved because when the husband's kisses began to cool the wife simply closed her eyes and decided that she was growing too old for romance.

* * *

It may once have been "cheaper to move than pay rent," but not in these days, when a woman insists on changing the color scheme and refurnishing in a different "period" every time she changes her address.

* * *

Never try to crowd yourself into a man's heart when it already shows signs of a traffic jam. There's always room for one more, of course—but why get smashed in the crush?

* * *

A husband and wife who have "never had a word of difference" either love each other blindly or are too indifferent to each other to have the energy to scrap.

* * *

In every love affair there is a psychological moment when it hangs in the balance, and not even a psychiatrist can tell you whether it will turn into an engagement or into an "entanglement," or just go to smash.

Velvet Spells Sophistication

The broadening upper bodice in the dark green crystelle velvet model below is made with strips of gold stitching. The skirt flounce gives a mermaid line which ends in a little train that makes walking easy and graceful. The back has a low cut neck.

Delicate white batiste for a shoulder yoke is the flattering touch of the black velvet gown above. Note the clever seaming about the hips, making a becoming sheath line, and the slits in the drop puff sleeve.

There are no sleeves and no hood on the brown velvet full length wrap above, but artful draping gives this popular silhouette to the model. The fabric is a new one which will not weather spot.

Pigskin Gloves That Will Wear

By Prunella Wood

FOR DURABILITY and ultra-smartness, the pigskin slipon glove is out front, in the long list of "what-to-be-worns" this season. But, better still, the pigskin gloves, in addition to lasting forever (if you don't lose one) are not seasonal, but always good style.

With fashion's S.O.S. for suits this season, what could be smarter?

In back of the automobile wheel, these same slip-ons are warm and comfortable, and your fingers won't play peek-a-boo with you in a few week.

Daily Suggestion for Self-Improvement

A WOMAN'S voice can be delightfully soothing, or it can be frightfully irritating. There are voices that are naturally well placed and other voices that should be torn up by the roots and started all over again. The nose is merely a sounding board — and should be used as such. If you feel you can improve your voice, try reading aloud to anybody who will listen.

MAYBE it is rude to contradict but there are few statements sillier than the old saw about there being nothing new under the sun, and about the old dog tinat can't be taught new tricks. Here we've had cotton looking like silk and going out in the evening, and silk looking like cotton and going into the kitchenette—and velvet has gone so untrue to type that it goes in swimming, rushes between the rain drops unconcernedly, and gets itself up in any weight or pile that it fancies.

IT is all velvet, however, so far as its charm goes. Women still can pat it approvingly because it shows off the texture of their skins, lends them an appearance of having money in the bank, and jacks up their feminine ego in a lot of other ways that suggest luxury.

People who can't wear black in any other fabric without being sunk can usually be attractive in black velvet, and this year there are a lot of other dark shades which they can choose from. A variety of surface effects that offer widely differing highlights, some of which may be more becoming than others, is another velvet trick of the moment.

THE numerous purple shades are something especially gorgeous in velvet. From blue lilac to the darkest pansy shades, through all the pink and blue tinges along the way, they all spell this thing called elegance which we are pursuing with renewed optimism.

It Carries Its Own End Tables

This very newest development In a studio twin divan has a folding wooden arm on each end wide enough for books and smoking accessories; two chromium tubes fit into sockets attached to the couch hold up the arms in the manner of end tables. The base of the couch is black metal with chromium bands, and the whole piece is very fitting to a modernistic interior. Write to Annice Brink, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope, if you wish to know more about the new twin studio divan.

Home Sewing's Growing in Interest

By MARGARET MATSON

SOME NEWS came to our desk today that seems highly significant—from a clothes point of view. The word came rather casually that eight young girls from the business office had just enrolled in a sewing school, making one entire evening class. Also, that the afternoon sewing classes were being composed of former bridge enthusiasts, and that yard goods buying was increasing healthily.

* * *

This, to me, seems a real indication that home sewing is going to be one of the important results of the new economic regime, and that much of the leisure time which business and industrial girls are now enjoying will be turned to advantage in such a manner. Married women with no business to go to each morning are feeling the urge, too, and are finding that the season's "elegance" can be achieved more inexpensively and at the same time with more individuality when they apply a little of their own labor to the project.

* * *

It isn't as if one had to accomplish the feat of making a dress with no previous instruction. Modern women as a whole are not adept at it. There has been no necessity and little time to practice the art. Moreover, ready-to-wear has been so adequate and convenient that even the impulse itself has been lacking. But now with time on our hands and less money in our pockets both impulse and necessity are alive. And the instruction which is quite, quite essential is being offered too.

* * *

Classes are being formed, "sewing bees" are becoming popular, patterns are being made more fool-proof and have minute instructions printed on them—everything, you see, to avoid any mistakes which the novice might otherwise make.

* * *

It all means, too, that we must know more about the selection of becoming clothes. It is not enough to go into a shop and try on dresses until the salesgirl has melted in her own perspiration and you have at last discovered the style that seems to suit you. But to visualize yourself in a dress, to know whether or not it will make you look short or tall, young or old, etc. etc., is more of a task. That's where pro-

'Zero Hours' Are Met and Defeated

By Therese Deschamps

THERE IS A ZERO hour in every day. Jump over it, leap around it, snub it, don't admit it —as you will, but there it is just the samey.

When the office clock starts crawling at a snail's pace at 3:40 or 4 o'clock—then it is time to take the little beauty kit out of the desk drawer, beat a hasty retreat to the privacy of the dressing room and freshen up the face as well as the nerves.

There is nothing so completely disarming to Sir Zero Hour — than to meet him head on with a fresh flock of powder after a cooling, soothing, refreshing cleanup.

* * *

If you are home for your zero hours, try freshening the face by your favorite method, put on your most becoming tea gown, get a nice tray full of tea and cakes to go with the gown—plop down in front of a cheerful fire (if it is that kind of a day) and let the world outside go whirling by you for a while.

* * *

There are several ways of luring energy back when it seems to have left you forever and ever. Throw yourself down on the bed for even a brief fifteen minutes, but relax completely.

If you are limited for time and have to make an engagement in less than the hour you should give to the pleasant rites of dressing, then we recommend dashing into the tub, filled to the brim. Stretch out, in water comfortably warm, and you can almost hear the nerves creak back into place.

* * *

There is a new perfume which has made a successful debute in social circles. It is guaranteed to make one feel like a fascinating witch with only the tiniest dab behind the ears. Some perfumes are exceedingly successful at killing off zero hours. They lift one to a ten dollar feeling when there is only six cents in the handbag.

Pearl Coronet Shifts Your Type

By Annice Brink

A CORONET of pearls that makes a little girl named Fitzgerald look like a Russian Princess! And that's no lie. We could have called Agnes Fitzgerald Anzia Fitzkowa, and you'd be none the wiser.

Seriously, the fashion of wearing ornaments in the hair has never offered itself in such beautiful and varied versions as it has

this fall, 1933. On the past blossomings of the mode it was either a brilliant band or a butterfly, or such and crowns were the identical brilliant band or butterfly, or such. Today the way you ornament your coiffure depends on you alone, and the type you want to create. To work with you, you have the whole constellation, coronets of a queen or a mere marquise, or practically anything you fancy in brilliants, pearls, gold or tin.

The pearls of the coronet shown are mounted on a flat setting of rhinestones. Very lovely. We'll be glad to tell you where it may be purchased, if you will send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request.

Beauty Questions and Answers

Dull Hair

Question: Since I got my permanent my hair is drab and dull. Will you please suggest something harmless to the hair that will help. L. R., Norwich, Ct.

Answer: Apply a little brilliantine, this will give it a sheen. We have the name of a very good pure olive oil shampoo, if you'll write again enclosing a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Bleach

Question: Is it true that lemons will bleach freckles?—Miss T. M., Lexington.

Answer: Yes, lemons will bleach some—they are especially good for removing vegetable stains from the hands but not particularly effective for freckles.

PANDORA TELLS YOU

DEAR PANDORA:

My wife, for some months, has been patronizing a certain hairdresser I know only as Pierre in a beauty culture palace. She used to come home raving about this "perfectly adorable" manner in which Pierre did this and Pierre did that, but now, although she goes more frequently, she does not say anything when she comes home.

The other night her hair appeared different to me and when I remarked upon it she casually remarked that Pierre had given her a special finger-wave. I think before he was using some kind of stinger machine. I certainly hate to think of any man having his fingers in my wife's hair, but I don't know just how to go about mentioning it. She is rather a handsome woman of middle age and always sensible, but aren't there apt to be gigolos in such places? I could, I suppose, learn waving myself, but I am in the hydrant business and don't have much time. A little advice, please, Pandora. J. K. L.

Auburndale.

DEAR J. K. L.:

The gigolos will get in YOUR hair—just now they're just in your own head—if you don't watch and ward off your unwarranted auspicions, my son. From what I've seen of Pierre and Henris and Marcels—and I get around considerably, boys and girls—their love appeal is pretty thin. If you have a scintilla of sense you'll give them the sleeve iggle, as your wife probably does—if she even gives them that.

Of course, she doesn't tell you about Pierre any more. When she began patronizing that choice little beautifying jernt, it was a little exciting to have a oui-oui monsieur, with a butterfly mustacre and the graces of a Paris boulevardier, all of a dither about madame's so beautiful hair. But now hes' probably nothing more than an old grimalkin, if not a marcel-waving robot.

Books---and Other Things

By Charles Hanson Towne

In Autumn

I walked within the Autumn woods
When all the leaves were burnished gold;
I said, "How lovely it will be
When I, too, have grown old."
For old folk nod, like trees, and dream
Bright dreams that never seem to cease,
Their days flow by in a long stream,
Touched with mysterious peace.
And here the woods were burning up.
A fire that flamed through the year's night,
They burned with memory of Spring's cup
And youth's long-gone delight.
Old, old and worn these Autumn woods;
Yet there is beauty in such gold.
Ah! to be lonely, like the moon,
And old, as stars are old!

* * *

Every time I leave a place in the country, I am invariably told by the natives that I am going away at the best time of the year. If I decided to return to the city in June, that month would immediately become the ideal period to view Nature in all her beautiful manifestations.

* * *

If anyone asked me to name the ideal age to be, I would say it was the age I happen to be at that moment. And if anyone inquired, "What do you consider the ideal season?" I would surely reply, "The season I am forced to go back to town." September found me in harness once more in New York, and I did nothing but dream how the hills and valleys in Connecticut must look on certain mellow mornings, with my grapevine laden with rich purple fruit, and a warm haze drifting over the countryside. Now, in October, I think how the trees are changing color, and how the cooler nights are thick with stars that presage the wintry skies. I think, too, how good it would be to have an evening in those valleys with the curtains drawn, and a roaring wood-fire lighting up the room, and a good book in my hand. But one cannot remain always where one desires most to be. The best we can hope for is happiness and peace in broken fragments.

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

MUCH THERE MAY BE IN A NAME. Although one may not choose one's own name it is possible to dignify it by men and personality and by writing it according to tenets of good breeding. To indulge in nicknames, to fail to give a friend her full name is inconceivable to the well-bred lady. For example, Mrs. George R. Briggs, sister-in-law of Dean Briggs of Harvard, has the most charming diction. Her choice of words and phraseology makes it a pleasure to listen to her ultra refined conversation.

Hustle, bustle, glib speech and nicknames bantered in public places is the bane of a North Shore society matron.

"I try to tell the children this, but they have no end of nicknames for their friends."

Here we stop a moment, to grant this lady part of her premise, the criticism of speedy conversation and the use of names in public. But we must say a word in defense of nicknames. Rightly used, there is a desirable intimacy about a nickname.

DOROTHY LAWRENCE

But it should have a substantial basis, for instance, "Bubbles" Sortwell, for that effervescing North Shore debutante who accomplished so many interesting things and is constantly bubbling over merriment.

* * *

Then too there is "Mimi" Winslow. Her nickname is befitting this lithe and dainty dancer, whose sense of poetic rhythm brought her stage acclaim.

Ellen Pierce

"Abbie," for the charming Aldrich debutante who made her formal bow last year, befits demure Abigail, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Aldrich of Brookline.

Miss Harriet Fuller is "Patsy" to her friends who have almost forgotten her baptismal name. Very dainty and feminine she is in the bright green wool sport frock that she is sporting with a trig brown beret atop her crowning golden brown glory.

Miss Rosamond Rust is better known as "Roddy" Rust. Tall, slender and dark, society is already speculating how beautiful she will be as a Yuletide bride, for she will wed Mr. Reginald Stewart Ward.

Another appropriate nickname is that of "Bobby" Ellsworth, well known in fashionable North Shore circles. Especially gay and "bobsy" is she this fall in brown and white checked ensemble.

But to return, the lady of The North Shore. She is one who knows whereof she speaks of the American disregard for titles. There again there is a dignity and a significance to a title, though the American regard for titles is but a silly affectation. But, the lady points out, the error of the wife of the city official who agreed with the Queen of the Belgians by blurting out, "You said a mouthful Queen." Such does not reflect too well on the manners and customs of America.

We do not take the trouble to learn how to address nobility. In all probability it is an heritage from our Pilgrim Fathers to laugh at titles, and all regal pomp. But even Puritan simplicity can be carried too far. It is polite to know how to address the distinguished correctly.

Los Angeles, Oct. 14—That film crusader, King Vidor, is off to a flying start with another revolutionary idea. King will direct his own scenario of "Give Us the Right to Live," a highly dramatic story dealing with the problems that face illegitimate children. The picture will be made on the R-K-O lot and released by them, although Vidor will assume the entire burden of production.

"The Crowd," another Vidor picture, dealt with the heartaches of the underpaid salaried men and the struggle to live. James Murray, an unknown, was put in the lead. An unknown high school girl will be sought among the promising youngsters in Los Angeles for the lead in "Give Us the Right to Live."

Stardom for Myrna

Can you bear it? Myrna Loy, the Oriental siren of yesterday, becomes a school teacher. I think I mentioned that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer had plans to star Miss Loy. One of the first starring pictures to lift her from the leading category to stardom is "Miss Bishop," especially purchased for her. Bess Street Aldrich, who writes those nice innocuous stories of nice people, is the author of "Miss Bishop," which is all about a school teacher. We hope this one gets paid. Miss Loy co-stars with Clark Gable in "China Seas" before she puts on the school teacher mantle.

Comic Imported

Wonder what Nigel Bruce, English comedian, thought of his introduction to Hollywood society. He was in Elizabeth Allen's party at the Bowery costume party and he spent much of the evening talking with Charlie Chaplin. Bruce seemed to be having a gay time in his typically American outfit. Brought here by Fox, he makes his debut in "Murder in Trinidad," a story by John Vandercook. Speaking of jolly England, I hear that Winfield Sheehan has acquired the screen rights of "Nymph Errant," a successful London play.

* * *

Marlen's New Man

Helpless to stop the gossip that, he was the chief instructor in Greta Garbo's life, Gavin Gordon suffered from the meaningless chatter. You might think such a report would help an actor, but it acted in the reverse in Mr. Gordon's case. He is coming back now in the best part he has had in months, that of Count Gregory Orlof, Catherine the Great's lover. It's a good chance for any actor to play in a Marlene Dietrich picture and this is a particularly worth while part.

* * *

Hollywood Chatter

Rumors of a deal pending between Samuel Goldwyn and M-G-M for the release of Ronald Colman are current. William Hawks, who represents the Colman interests, says that any announcement at this time would be premature. Colman returns in January and, since it seems impossible to reconcile him to the idea of making other Goldwyn pictures, Sam may have grown a little weary of all the discussions and decided to release Colman, although no papers have yet been signed.

* * *

Snapshots of Hollywood

Big game, not of the feminine type either, is taking GARY COOPER to Montana. He is going a hunting with his brother, SYLVIA' SIDNEY, all done up in new clothes an' everything, in a ringside seat with B. P. SCHULBERG at the fights. ELEANOR HOLM and ARTHUR JARRETT still in the hand-holding stage also at the fights. EDDIE CANTOR forced to make a speech from the ring after insistent calls. LORETTA YOUNG and SALLY BLANE looking as alike as two peas in a pod in a party at the Cocoanut Grove. MARK KELLY, representing his friend, DAMON RUNYON, sold another RUNYON story to JACK WARNER. IAN KEITH and PERN ANDRA, BOOTS MALLORY and BILLY CAGNEY all breakfasting but not together at AL LEVEY'S tavern. Here's a new romance. NORMAN KRASNA and HELEN MACK dining at the Vine st. Brown Derby tete-a-tete. DIANA WYNYARD moving into a house in Beverly. The RALPH MORGANS also buying a house in Beverly Hills, ditto WILLIAM HAWKS (BESSIE LOVE). AL KAUFMAN entertaining with a small party after the opening of the Chinese in honor of MAE WEST. Many more at the Saturday football game between St. Mary's and U. S. C. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Chevalier Star on Met Screen

Thanks be, Maurice Chevalier is what he is! And Edward Everett Horton is what he is! These two plus, a mere dog, as enliven "The Way to Love," at the Metropolitan, that it lifts itself above the story to the plane of being worthwhile entertainment.

* * *

So far as the fiction goes, this is a bedtime tale about Paris. M'sieu Chevalier is serving as a sort of messenger, in a shop conducted by M'sieu Horton. They're in the Bohemian quarter, and the two able thespians most excellently mirror the spirit of the locale and its people. Romance flings itself in the Gallic actor's path; 'tis Ann Dvorak, gypsy lass, fleeing from the wrath of a knife-throwing guardian. She is the second fugitive he has befriended, the dog being the first.

* * *

Hollywood Fiction

Thereafter, with a story technique that you will find to be mystifying glass to discover as Hollywood, pure and simple, the mating of the lovers is made difficult. For no reason at all their romance is held tenuous, much after the manner of children pulling chewing-gum with their fingers.

M'sieu Maurice ambitiously steps upward in the world and graduates into the uniform of an official guide to tourists. Even then, when he is making sufficient francs and sous to set up a household of his own, the wedding bells are deferred, but the course of true love is later smoothed out, and the couple, we hope, live happily ever after.

* * *

Backgrounds are superb and only the theme and the intrusion of inept players who merely give this West Coast version of Parisian manners and morals keep "The Way to Love" from being a hearty sort of a success. But such is the genius of Chevalier and Horton, and such the winsome intelligence of the dog, that one is intrigued into attentive interest and enjoyment.

Revue on Stage

Naturally, being a Chevalier feature, "The Way to Love" is destined to great audience acclaim.

Ten Concerts Planned by Peoples Symphony

Beginning Oct. 22, at 8:15 p. m., the People's Symphony Orchestra will inaugurate a series of ten Sunday afternoon concerts to be given in Jordan Hall under the direction of Fabien Sevitzky. The concerts will be presented to Greater Boston music lovers on the following dates: Oct. 22, Nov. 5, Nov. 19, Dec. 10, Jan. 7, Jan. 29, Feb. 11, Feb. 25, March 18, and the concluding concert on April 8.

Star Returns for New Fame

Colleen Moore and Spencer Tracy, in "The Power and the Glory," photoplay featured at RKO Keith's. Miss Moore is magnificent as she makes her return to motion pictures.

Boosting Wins Gold Watch

Joseph A. Di Pesa, director of publicity for Loew's theaters in Boston, is receiving congratulations on the announcement that he has been awarded the major prize in a nation-wide advertising and exploitation contest conducted by United Artists. The prize is a gold watch, appropriately engraved in a precious metal.

Joseph Di Pesa

Of the vet-eran press agent's efforts in exploiting "Hallelujah, I'm a Bum" during its engagement at Loew's State some months ago.

Mr. Di Pesa is a well known figure in Boston theatrical circles, having been for 25 years active in advertising and publicity work.

Vaudeville

To headline the Scollay's vaudeville show Monday, Bernard Lohmuller brings his "Rhythm of Flame," electrical stage spectacle that is said to be the only act of its kind in the world. The revue features Avanos Gaylee, dancer; Elinor and Buddy Cole, "pep and personality" twins, and David Mills.

The second act brings Bert Walton, in a new comedy, singing and talking act, "La Raconteur Distingue." Johnny Berkes with the Cordova Sisters in "Spanish Omelette," a singing and dancing act; Paul Kirkland in "The High Stepper"; Morton & West in "Black Is White," a comedy, singing and talking turn; the Four Aces, in "Flying High," a casting act; the June Sisters, in a singing, dancing and piano offering, and James Hope, assisted by Miss Green, are other acts.

The screen feature will be "Too Much Harmony," with Bing Crosby, Judith Allen, Jack Oakie, Skeets Gallagher, Harry Green, Ned Sparks and Sammy Cohen.

Le Gallienne, Pauline Lord Open Here

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Three new plays and three more days of "Let 'Em Eat Cake." But that doesn't tell the whole program for the coming week in the theater. For on Thursday, after the fashion of the split-week in vaudeville, Miss Eva Le Gallienne will suspend for a time her performance as Juliet in "Romeo and Juliet" at the Colonial, and introduce one of her repertory stars, Miss Josephine Hutchinson, in "Alice in Wonderland."

Miss Le Gallienne will initiate her Boston engagement, and with it begin a tour scheduled to give 30 weeks of booking a view of her talented self and company in "Romeo and Juliet." Since Miss Le Gallienne first played the role of Juliet April 8, 1930—the Shakespeare play has been one of the most popular in her repertory. Richard Waring will be the Romeo.

Aline Bernstein designed the settings and costumes, and Tchaikovsky's beautiful musical setting will be used throughout the play.

The Le Gallienne engagement will continue two weeks. As in the first, "Romeo and Juliet" will begin the second week, and "Alice in Wonderland" will end it. Incidentally, the Colonial title have received their record advance increment since Otis Skinner and Maude Adams came to town two seasons ago. That attraction enjoyed the largest advance sale, for a non-musical show, in the theater's history.

* * *

The other two incoming attractions are Pauline Lord in "The Late Christopher Bean" at the Plymouth and Walter Gilbert in "Brothers" at the Wilbur. In Miss Lord's supporting cast in Sidney Howard's fine comedy are Walter Kingsford, Effie Shannon, William Lawson, Harry Worth, Edgar Kent, Walter Erskine, Katherine Locke and Eugenie Chapel.

"The Late Christopher Bean" played profitably all last season at the Henry Miller Theater in New York. It is localized in Vermont. Miss Rebekah Hobbs' American Theatre Society is sponsoring the Boston engagement, which will take in two weeks.

La Gallienne as 'Juliet'

The charming love story of Romeo and Juliet will be retold on the stage of the Colonial Theater, beginning Monday. Eva Le Gallienne, boast of the American stage, and Rediard Waring will have the title roles.

Gayety Theater

Starting tomorrow the Gayety screen will feature "The Secret of the Blue Room," with Lionel Atwill, Paul Lukas and Gloria Stuart. The co-feature will be "Her Resale Value."

Lee Tracy and Jean Harlow Are Stars

By HARRIS MORGAN

"Bombshell," at Loew's State, unwinds itself as one of the showiest of recent pictures out of Hollywood. Short of breaking right out into music, it boasts the trappings of the story portions of extravaganza, so that one might call it the glorification of the platinum blonde, specifically Jean Harlow. For audience fare, it appears to be a hilarious success; as cinema, it presents a technical lavishness few photoplays have enjoyed, but its theme is an odd mixture, with farce as the best ingredient.

* * *

Assuredly, this is Miss Harlow's day of screen glory. She and her bonnie hair are given the rarest sort of expert play and treatment, and her form displays the richest sort of silks and satins and such. She is the bombshell, being an explosive sort of lady, boosted to stardom in the narrative, and ballyhooed by no less an actor than Lee Tracy.

Boston in the Plot

Lee, in his love, with his subject and stops at nothing to foil the many sweethearts that come a-wooing the fair damsel. His publicity involves her in a succession of ludicrous situations. These make for laughter, and the best in the movie queen are the most extravagant, and her entourage is accurate to the last detail of dogs and jewels and all other de luxe fittings.

The trouble with the film is that it gets off the farcical track and lacks snap to its dialogue.

Enacting Film Scenes Star's Big Triumph

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Comfily seated at the RKO Keith Boston, for quite a stretch during the stage show one may let the mind's eye take wing, and imagine himself on the inside at Hollywood, watching 'em "shoot" a scene. Ten feet above these Boston boards, a star of the movies is re-enacting some of her favorite passages. It is Barbara Stanwyck, and she does it very well indeed.

* * *

This world famous actress may be accorded praise above that going to the usual filmdom favorite doing an "in person." She does present something original. Just about the time she and the stock interviewer appear, and you're thinking it is going to be just another personal appearance, Miss Stanwyck is suddenly veiled from sight.

Barbara Stanwyck

In a jiffy you're sitting in on a scene from her "Ladies of Leisure," wherein she shone gloriously on screen, as you may recall.

"The Miracle Woman"

Then comes the climax of her act.

The star is in the pulpit of her dead father's church—think back to the plot of "The Miracle Woman." Bitterly she assails the congregation—who does it so realistically that you in this gay theater audience seem to be transplanted to that sacred edifice in the make-believe story. A real voice cries to her from one of the boxes, and again and again she hurls back her challenging damnation.

Curtain!

* * *

And that brings the triumphant acclaim, and as neat a little speech as any lady of stage or screen has voiced into these ears of ours.

Miss Stanwyck's appearance is an entire success.

* * *

Charlie Chan in Again

The Boston's stage bill also has varied talent, including Johnnie Woods, to whom we are inclined to give the palm as the best of all the radio imitators.

* * *

On screen, Warner Oland again is seen in as Earl Derr Biggers' story. This one is "Charlie Chan's Greatest Case," with locale in Hawaii, and quite a baffling mystery to be solved. Oland is glove-fitted to the role (or, vice versa), and as there is plenty of comedy, along with much love interest, the film is, on the whole, just the thing for lovers of thriller films of this type.

'Stage Mother' at Orpheum

New vaudeville and the first downtown appearance of Alice Brady in "Stage Mother," furnish the entertainment at Loew's Orpheum this new week. Miss Brady is at her film best; her portrayal of the ambitious mother who will stop at nothing to further the career of her daughter, is brilliant acting, even surpassing her work in "When Ladies Meet." Capable performances are given by Maureen O'Sullivan, Franchot Tone, Ted Healy and Phillips Holmes.

The vaudeville is headed by the gifted humorist, Oscar Loraine, billed as "The Violin Nuttist." His quips brought rounds of laughter and his violin solos were encored.

Penalty Double Requires Two-Trick Safety Margin

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The factor of safety dictates that in making a Penalty Double a player should have a margin of at least 2 tricks, for the fact that a Penalty Double is made quite frequently permits the Declarer to adopt unusual methods of play which would be neither logical nor probable if he were playing an undoubled contract, and thus the player who takes it upon himself to double quite frequently sees one of his expected setting tricks vanish into thin air, as was the case in the hand below, played by Mrs. Carroll Forrest in a rubber game at the Crockford's Club, New York.

North, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

	♠ A Q J 10 5 ♡ R ♢ K Q 10 7 ♣ A 9 4
♠ K 7 6 4 3 ♡ A Q 7 ♢ 9 3 ♣ Q 8 2	North West East South	♠ — ♡ K J 10 5 4 3 2 ♢ 8 6 4 2 ♣ 5 5
	♠ 9 8 2 ♡ 9 6 ♢ A J 5 ♣ K J 10 7 3

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	3 ♡	3 ♡
4 ♠ (1)	Pass	Pass	Double (2)
Redouble (3)	Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) North has a very fine hand and partner's free bid, which suggests that there is at least some kind of support for a spade bid, indicates that the hand should play at game.

(2) A bad Double. It is true that West has five trumps and that the Declarer probably will be forced on a heart lead, but still West has nothing to gain and much to lose by disclosing the trump situation before the play. In addition his hand does not seem to contain the tricks to set the contract. His partner has made an Overcall, and may not be able to produce any tricks whatever, as, in fact, he did not.

(3) Probably unwise, as East and West have a very fine save in the bid of five hearts. They will probably lose only two clubs and two diamonds at a contract of five hearts, and thus suffer a mere penalty of 250 points. However, East, influenced no doubt by the fact that he was void of spades, anticipated a certain penalty and so made no further bid.

East opened a small heart. West won with the Ace and returned the suit. Mrs. Forrest ruffed with the spade 10, desiring to retain the possibility of leading trumps twice from the Dummy. The Dummy was entered by leading a small diamond, which was won with the Knave, and the first lead of spades disclosed what North had feared—namely, that all the trumps were held by West. A second round of trumps was led, but North then realized that she could not afford to lead trumps once more as then the entire hand was likely to disintegrate. So the Ace of diamonds was returned and followed with another diamond. West decided not to ruff, but instead discarded a club. North continued with the fourth round of diamonds, and West now had no choice. He cashed a small trump and returned another trump, which gave North an overtrick, as there was no difficulty whatever in the play of any suit at this time.

Today's Question

North opens the bidding with three diamonds. Is this a Forcing or shut-out bid, the declaration being one more than necessary to complete the game?

Answer: The three-diamond bid shows a solid diamond suit of about six- or seven-card length with a sprinkling of Queens and Knaves on the side. It invites a sporty three-notrump bid. With 60 on the score the situation is a little different—In this case it should be construed as a shut-out bid.

Nat Butler Takes Cheat Out of the Six-Day Races

Garden's Mad Merry-Go-Round On 12-Hour Basis

By AUSTEN LAKE

Having a Sunday school, almost I should say, a childlike faith in human nature, I dislike to catch people in an untruth, even when it is such a seemingly harmless untruth as pretending to ride a bicycle in the early hours of the morning but going to bed instead. So I am relieved to hear from Mr. Nat Butler that I will not have to get up in the wee, small hours of the morning, as I did last spring, to see that the Garden's six-day riders keep their covenant with the public. Because, where the riders were supposed to ride around the clock last April, this time they are only riding between the hours of 1 p. m. and 1 a. m., with a merciful period for rest in between.

Now I have a weakness for six-day bicycle racing and Marathon dancing, and am like to drop in on them at outlandish times, just to refresh myself by watching the agonized toil of the performers. Charley Berry of the Red Sox and I used to stay up all night to see the Marathon dancers when the Sox were training at Pensacola, Fla., because, being mutual nature students, we loved to watch the tormented writhings, drawn faces and red eyes of the dancers. And sometimes we would sit patiently for hours until some undernourished girl would suddenly fly into a sick, nerve-frayed tantrum and claw her partner's face for the sheer hatred of having looked into that face for days and weeks. Then Charley and I, our souls in our eyes and spirits soaring, would go out and have a cup of coffee before going to bed. "Nature in the rawr," Charley used to call it.

But the night that we fairly gloated, was when a slender youth whose ribs showed through his shirt and who came from the Blackjacks, as the Southerns call those thin stemmed pines in the back, alligator country, had a fit from stark exhaustion and cracked his skull on the ring post of the dance floor. Charley and I talked about that for weeks.

Reggie McNamara Adds a Scar But Little Cash

So, last April, having an uncontrollable urge to see the fatigue and suffering of the six-day riders, who were then rounding out their fourth day, I got out of bed before the chickens and went into the Garden. I went in soft-like, because I did not want to startle the athletes into falling off their frail wheels at the sight of an early morning stranger.

And what did I see? I ask you, what?

Why, instead of Norman Hill, Felix La Fentre, Rene Boogman, Prendente Lille, Joe De Vito and the rest of the prize riders, there are a lot of wheel swipes and floor-handlers trundling themselves along the flat of the track like a lazy herd of muttons, some with their arms over each other's shoulders and some with cigarettes hanging from their lips. And while their masters snored in the little track-side kennels, the menials, who usually fetch food or skin leaky tires off the wheel rims, were riding proxy, masquerading in their lord's colors. Well it was such a shock!

But at that time the race, which is really less of a race than a squirrel-cage dementia, was promoted by two swarthy New York gentlemen who lammed out the freight entrance on the last night, absent-mindedly forgetting a flock of unpaid bills. Whereas now it is being directed by Nat Butler, a gent of the old six-day school who has scruples, a firm chin and a level eye. I have known him for years and recommend him.

Now, being still a nature student and morbidly curious about such things, I am waiting to see if this is the splinter-proof track that Mr. Pat Mulvey, the specialist, says it is. Because this morning I asked Reggie McNamara, the 46-year-old veteran who will be riding his 94th six-day race, to see the scar that he received at the Garden last spring when he tangled peddles on the steep bank and came sliding along the track under the wreckage.

That spring night I happened to be standing a scant 10 feet away as Reggie rubbed up a bayonet-like splinter that tore a ragged flap of flesh from his stomach, which in a dazed silence he smoothed down with the flat of his palm, as casually as another man might arrange a tear in his trousers.

Four handlers in soiled colored jerseys had trundled his limp body through the cellar passages, each holding a leg or arm and shuffling to avoid each other's heels. Spectators, men and women, just arriving, paused to inspect the gaping wound which might have been made by some ferocious beast. The men stared seriously, as though puzzled, and the women grimaced and put their hands to their cheeks.

"You Have No Idea How These Riders Can Take It"

As the group turned into the emergency room, a gloomy, buff-colored place with rubbing tables, open trays of medical stuff and a filthy washstand, a low ground-hum vibrated from the ceiling as the riders continued to circle the wooden platter overhead. The reek of ether and wintergreen overpowered the cellar and body smells.

Then the gaping circle of handlers had broken to admit a fat-tish, sag-faced man who wore horn-rimmed glasses with thick lenses so that his eyes seemed unnaturally large and anxious. He inspected the wound closely, dispassionately as a plumber might examine a leaky pipe. Outside he, who was Mr. Wahrburg, said, "Su-u-ure. He'll be out so soon as they sew him cop. You got no idea how these six-day riders can take it."

But McNamara did not ride again in that race and for the next few nights he lived in the grimy hovel below stairs, risking septic poisoning and lying on a soiled, springless mattress filled with straw. He did not complain, but the Wahrburgs bleated bitterly about the foul blow that fate had dealt their gate. I learned today that they had paid McNamara only $120 of his $500 guarantee and had given him a bit of penmanship for the rest.

McNamara has lost track of his surgical stitches, though he has been hemmed, and gusseted enough to make a suit of clothes. His body is a mass of spider-shaped scars, huge red grooves where his flesh has been ripped by splinters or gouged by the infield fences. It recalls the time that I tried to inventory the gashes and smashes suffered by Eddie Shore, Bruins defense man, and counted more than 500 stitches that had been taken on his person. I will match these two, Shore and McNamara, as the two most hom-stitched mortals in the world, whose combined sewing would cover a quarter length of a football field. How my old pal and nature student, Charley Berry, would have enjoyed those scars.

HIALEAH TO USE SALIVA TEST

New York, Oct. 14 (INS)—Joseph E. Widener, racing power in New York, and owner of the Hialeah track in Miami, announced today that he would stop any possibility of doping horses at his track by introduction thers of the saliva test, as used in France.

This calls for the building of a single stall near the paddock. Before the race, during the running, or immediately afterward the stewards, if they think a horse is acting in a strange manner, can order the animal taken to the box.

Gar Wood Flies to Boston to Show Miss America X

By E. B. SCHRIFTGIESSER

The craft which won the Harmsworth trophy last month and which established the world speed record of more than 100 miles an hour on Florida waters a year ago, is to be exhibited to the public, beginning Monday at 661 Beacon st. She will remain here a week, according to George E. Willis, president of Air Conditioners, Inc.

Lying in the cradle on the show room floor, the Miss America X gives little indication of her enormous speed. She has almost no sheer, and her bottom is practically flat as far aft as the step. From the step aft her sections form a slight V. Designed to skim over the surface of the water on a cushion of air and spray, the hydroplane looks heavy and lifeless out of her native element.

Tonight at the Copley-Plaza a private dinner is being tendered to Gar Wood by Gillis and a few friends. The speed king leaves for Pittsburgh immediately afterwards.

Ring Injury Fatal to Atlanta Boxer

Atlanta, Oct. 14 (AP)—James McDonald, 27-year-old Atlanta boxer, has answered his last bell. The fighter died last night from injuries suffered last Thursday night in a bout with Hal Glymph.

He had fought as a welterweight for several years around Atlanta under the name of "Battling Bozo" which he borrowed from the original "Battling Bozo" of Birmingham.

Physicians said he suffered a fractured skull and a brain injury in the Thursday fight.

N. H. refused to open up, and following one runsh, Hapbey again punted outside on Harvard's 38-yard line. Graffam took Dean's return punt to his own 33-yard line, a 10-yard gain on the exchange. Hapbey's next punt went outside on Harvard's 23-yard line, then Dean uncorked a long, low return kick to N. H. 27-yard line. On a quick kick Hapbey booted back to Harvard's 27. Running from kick formation, Dean lost 5 yards.

Graffam let Dean's kick go and White downed it for Harvard on N. H.'s 23-yard line. Hapbey a next kick was partially blocked and Harvard took the ball on New Hampshire's 45-yard line. Wells circled Andrews for a first down on New Hampshire's 30-yard line. On a spinner Locke broke through tackle to the 3-yard line. An offside penalty advanced the ball to the one-yard line, from where Dean went over for a touchdown. Wells kick failed.

Score—Harvard, 6; New Hampshire, 0.

Graffam returned Dean's kick-off to his 27-yard line. A forward pass, Hapbey to Wilson, was completed for a 10-yard gain. Hapbey punted to Locke, who went outside on his 17-yard. Graffam took Dean's return punt to his 41-yard line. Then a forward pass, Hapbey to Graffam, gave N. H. a first down on Harvard's 40 as the period ended.

Score—Harvard, 6; N. H., 0.

SECOND PERIOD

After losing twenty yards on three plays Hapbey kicked outside on Harvard's 33 yard line. Moriarity threw Pesky for no gain. Dean kicked to Graffam who was brought down on his own 13 yard line. New Hampshire was penalized 15 yards for clipping. Pesky took Hapbey's kick to the seven yard line but the ball was brought back and Harvard was penalized 15 yards for clipping, putting the ball to midfield.

Lane broke through right tackle for a 45-yard run to New Hampshire's five-yard line, where Miller brought him down from behind. Lane smashed through for a touchdown. Wells kicked the goal.

Score—Harvard 13, N. H. 0.

New Hampshire's kickoff went over the goal line and on the second play Dean punted to the N. H. 44-yard line. Following two incomplete forward passes, Hapbey punted to Pesky, who was forced outside on Harvard's 34-yard line. Pesky circled Angwin and went to N. H. 40-yard line before he was forced outside; then Lane circled right end to N. H. 16-yard line.

Wells' pass intended for Nazro fell in the end zone. N. H.'s ball on 20 yard line. Miller broke through for 5 yards. Hapbey's punt was allowed to roll to Harvard's 20 and it was downed there. Lane broke through right tackle again for 20 yards. Harvard put in an entire new team. On a series of short advances the B team worked the ball down the field finally winding up with a 20 yard end run for a touchdown by Adzigian. Nevins kicked the point.

Score Harvard 20, N. H. 0.

The kick-off by Demers went outside on Harvard's 40-yard line. After a line plunge and a skirt by Adzigian, giving Harvard a first down at midfield, New Hampshire recovered a fumble. Demers threw a pass to Pederzani for a first down on Harvard's 33-yard line. Then Wilde completed another pass for a short gain. Nevins broke up the threat by intercepting a forward pass and running it back to his 33-yard line. The half ended.

Score—Harvard 20, New Hampshire 0.

PROVIDENCE CUBS SCORE 7-0 VICTORY OVER B. C. FRESHMEN

EAGLETS MISS BIG CHANCE IN FIRST PERIOD

The Boston College freshmen outplayed and outpushed the Hessmen seven times but Providence College in a game at University Heights this morning, but the Friars capitalized a break in the third period to win 7-0.

Providence was out of its own territory only twice during the game. In the third period Lee Davis, Providence right halfback, hooked Tottilino's punt and Hagstrom, right end for the visitors, recovered the ball on the B. C. 30-yard line.

Three rushes at the line failed to gain and on the fourth down, Hank Hoar, Providence right halfback, ran back and tossed a long forward pass to Hagstrom, who dropped across the goal line for the only touchdown of the game. Davis then missed the goal for the extra point.

Boston College freshmen had their best opportunity to score in the first period, when E. C. recovered a Providence fumble on the Providence 25-yard line. A forward to Gambiron, however, was intercepted by Providence on the 9-yard line, and the chance went glimmering.

YALE DEFEATS W. & L. 14-0

Yale Bowl, New Haven, Conn., Oct. 14 (AP)—After a slow start, Yale put on steam in the final three periods to score a 14 to 0 victory today in their international clash with Washington & Lee.

Yale scored in the second period after a 46-yard march and again in the third period after Arnold of the Generals fumbled a punt on the 13-yard line.

FIRST PERIOD

Two fumbles by Capt. Lassiter of Yale and beautiful punting by Arnold enabled the Generals to keep the ball in Eli territory during the first half of the period. The Generals, however, were unable to advance farther than the 25-yard line.

Both of Lassiter's fumbles, the first on the kickoff and the second on a punt, were recovered by the visitors' in Yale territory.

The Eli captain continued to have trouble hanging on to the ball. As the period neared a close, Lassiter fumbled a punt on his own 45-yard line, but Nichols recovered for the Elis. Then Lassiter to Marting, gave the Elis five yards and put the ball on the visitors' 40-yard line as the period ended.

Score—Yale, 0; W. & L., 0.

SECOND PERIOD

With Tommy Curtis in the backfield in place of Lassiter, the Elis marched 48 yards to the first touchdown. Curtis carried over from the two-yard stripe through the center of the line. Clare Curtis placed kicked for the extra point.

Score—Yale, 7; W. & L., 0.

Fuller and Tommy Curtis led the Eli scoring march. The former contributed two substantial gains, one of 17 yards and another of eight as the Elis reeled off four successive first downs.

The Generals were on the defensive throughout the remainder of the period. They succeeded, however, in keeping the Elis from penetrating beyond their own 7-yard stripe, dun largely to a 15-yard penalty that nullified most of Whitehead's 25-yard gain around left end.

The ball was in Yale's possession on the visitors' 45-yard stripe as the period ended.

Score—Yale, 7; W. and L., 0.

Zabala Winner of Fair Run

Chicago, Oct. 14 (AP)—Juan Carlos Zabala, Argentine winner of the 1932 Olympic marathon title, today captured the National A. A. U. 10,000 meter championship at the Century of Progress.

Zabala won easily, but his time of one hour, 44 minutes, 45.6 seconds failed to threaten the world record of 1:40 :57.6 established by another Argentine, Jose Ribas, at Buenos Aires last year.

Setting the pace from the time the 21 runners began the long race over the pavement of the Century of Progress, Zabala finished almost 12 minutes ahead of August Sloboda, of Chicago, who was timed in 1:55.27. Bruno Rassini, another Chicago runner, was a fast finishing third in 1:57.37, while Frank Jerry, of Pittsburgh, was fourth.

For six of the eight laps, William Dwyer, of Chicago, forced the pace, but two laps from home Sloboda moved into the runner-up position. He was never a threat to the South American, however, as Zabala swung around the final two laps minutes ahead of his nearest rival.

Spartan - Redskin Tilt May Jam Fenway

By DAVID F. EGAN

The party consisted of four—George Pottsy Clarke, who coaches the Portsmouth Spartans, a sweetheart professional football outfit which will raise threatening headguards against the Redskins tomorrow afternoon; Dr. John Edward Neff, pal of Rudy Hulswitt, trainer of the team, hinter at the fact that Nemo Liebold will be the Red Sox manager next season; George Stanley McManus, who sometimes uses the one-over-one, and more often uses the five-over-one system in what he stoutly declares to be contract bridge; and your emissary.

A—I'm an Illinois man, and Zuppke coached me when I went there, so naturally I think him a great coach. But I think that Percy Haughton has given as much to football as any coach that ever lived. He was a great coach and a great character. He built up espirit de corps.

Q—You may take your espirit de corps, Mr. Clarke; add a dash of mustard, subtract two, and where are you without plays? What formation do you use?

ADOPTS FROM P. D.

A—I use a cumbination of the old Haughton single wing-back system and Warner's double wing-back. We are most effective from the single wing-back, which was Haughton's system, and is now really the Notre Dame system.

Q—Well, don't you think that the Warner system, as employed by Lone Star Dietz, is the greatest offensive measure in football?

A—The men may beat me tomorrow afternoon at Fenway Park, but the system won't. I think it's technically weak. Their system depends on finessing.

Here Mr. McManus interrupted to say, as a bridge expert, that finessing was right down his lane. "Suppose," he remarked, "that you have the ace in your hand and the queen is in the dummy's and—" But a pillow was stuffed down his tonsils and Mr. Clarke continued while Mr. McManus gurgled.

"I want to have 11 men in every play. A finesse now and then, of course," said Mr. Clarke, "but I want 11 men in every play."

Q—These college teams have a full array, full in the sense of complete, of assistant coaches. Don't you professionals have assistants?

ONE COACH ENOUGH

A—No. They used to say that any large college had a coach for every man. I'm the coach, but I have very clever boys on the job. Christianson, the Oregon tackle, helps with the line, and Father Lumpkin with the backfield. But they just happen to be outstanding players. Outstanding, but just players. I'm the coach.

Q—So your creed is—

A—Portsmouth has six fundamental plays, founded entirely on the Haughton system. Of course, we have several variations.

Q—And the best passer in the league, Mr. Clarke?

A—I think that Glenn Presnell of Nebraska, who is with us, is on even terms with Benny Friedman. Sometimes I think he's better. Sometimes I think he's not so good. Newman is a comer, a great prospect. Neither of the Green Bay Packers can't compare with any of the three.

WORLD BLIND COLLEGES

A—I beg the question. I'll answer it this way. If I took a N. Y. U. let us say, and I may see one man who can make my team, see another. I'll take a squint at Michigan, and possibly I'll see a few.

Here Mr. Clarke expanded, though cautiously.

"I'm an Illinois man, from tip to toe," he said, "and Illinois has been going soundly for the past few years. One night, a coach asked me what I thought of the difference between the pros and the collegians. My answer was that I'd send my team down there the following fall; that Zuppke could do all the painting and all the golfing he wished; and that he wouldn't have to worry about losing a game on the schedule. Does that answer your question?"

Norway Seeks Sharkey

JACK SHARKEY has received an offer for a bout with Otto Von Porat in Norway. Johnny Buckley has taken the matter under consideration until such time as he finds out what they use to pay off fighters in Norway. Not being a linguist Buckley does not know what to demand from the Norwegian promoters. But he insists he will not consider being paid off in dried fish.

Jack Kenney, president of the New England A. A. U., once took a team of amateur boxers to Norway, and had to debate for six hours to get any money.

Loughran Asks $25,000

AT ANY RATE, Tommy Loughran is ambitious. He has asked a guarantee of $25,000 for a return bout with Jack Sharkey. He says he might agree to cut his ante to $20,000. As of any promoter is offering that kind of money in view of the fact that the recent Sharkey-Loughran bout in Philadelphia was a financial fiasco. Not considering Sharkey's guarantee of $25,000. The days of big guarantees in the boxing game are over unless somebody dug up a new flock of angels.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

I NOTE THAT "Big Boy" Rawson of Dorchester is thundering down the fistic trail again. He has been signed to meet [illegible] at Mechanic Building in the Burke Sporting Club's show at Mechanic Building Monday night.

"Big Boy" was one of the outstanding figures among the amazing crop of heavyweights a few years ago. He blasted his way to the top behind a [illegible] record. One night Arena he met Joe Monte of Brockton with his famous right before the [illegible] before Monte came through in the dressing room.

Mr. Boston

They used to call Rawson the "new Dempsey." I know one very conservative business man who offered Mike Carr $10,000 a year to manage in those golden days. Rawson got half interest in the heavyweight's contract. Johnny Buckley bid $5000 for full control of Rawson. Carr turned these offers down with a shrug of his shoulders. Everybody else he figured [illegible] was going to develop a million dollar plan.

Rawson tired of New England scenery and went to New York where he placed himself under the management of Leo P. Flynn. When the latter died Big Boy returned to Boston.

I have always liked big fellows who could thump, and I have an idea I shall be a bit tense as I want to see Rawson let his right breeze at Surette . . .

Good Fighting Show

JIM MACDONALD tells me Rip Valenti has arranged what he considers a fine fighting show. I do not hesitate to agree with MacDonald who knows his cauliflower ears well as the next fellow.

There will be two 10-round bouts. K. O. Costello of Bath, Me., who gave Sammy Fuller a torrid battle in a Maine ring, will have Werther Arcelli of Boston as an opponent, while red-headed Mickey Bishop of Stoughton will punch away at Vittorio Livan of Italy.

Chris De Rosa of East Boston will oppose Joey Kemp of Cambridge over the six-round route. In four rounds bouts, Artie Cardinal of Arlington will battle Johnny Sherman of Dorchester, while Johnny Buckley of Lexington will take on Jack Shannon of this city.

Valenti promises the fans a new deal at Mechanics Building. He intends to feature local boxers, and believes his club will go somewhere.

President O. C. Huffman of Continental Can Co. gives us a pleasing trade picture. Mr. Huffman says the company's volume and profits have both shown a fairly steady uptrend since April, as compared with a year ago. The fact that this improvement has occurred in both the packaged can and general line can divisions is particularly encouraging in that the latter division serves a fairly represen-

NEW YORK CLOSE NET CHANGES

New York, Oct 14—Price changes for leading shares were narrow in today's abbreviated session of the New York Stock Exchange. Trading was at a quiet pace.

Utilities and a few scattered industrials maintained a steady tone of others, including metals and rails, eased fractions to more than a point. Oils suffered minor losses in light dealings.

In the final hour American Telephone improved a fraction while American Can, Consolidated Oil and Johns-Manville held about unchanged. Homestake Mining sagged 5 points and recessions of around a point or more were shown in Allied Chemical, Bethlehem, Baltimore & Ohio, Sears Roebuck, Case, Western Union, Du Pont, National Distillers, American Smelting, Santa Fe, McIntyre & Dome.

In the first hour stocks swung moderately lower in quiet trading. Alcohols and utilities were steadier than other division, which receded fractions to around a point.

American Telephone, American Commercial Alcohol, U. S. Smelting and Consolidated Gas ruled about unchanged. Du Pont, Case and Western Union lost a point or more each, whiles bares yielding fractions included U. S. Steel, Santa Fe, New York Central, McIntyre, American Can and Alaska Juneau.

Sharp advance of the dollar in foreign exchange markets was halted by early trading which left most of the more depressed European currencies steadied. The British pound sterling rallied to around $4.55 and the French franc was only slightly under its previous rate at 5.07¾ cents.

Sales to 11 a. m. approximated 459,000 shares.

Overnight news of the resignation of Germany from the League of Nations and the disarmament conference was of much interest to the financial district which saw in this development a further complication of the already mixed European situation. It was thought this turn of events would not particularly affect the recovery program in the United States. Bankers, however, were principally concerned because of the three boards which the United States has in the Reich.

Industrialists were cheered by the weekly bank statements which showed a further rise of $40,000,000 in "all other" loans of reporting New York Federal Reserve members. In the past two weeks these loans have increased about $90,000,000.

While the broadening of the "all other" loans group, which includes commercial lending as distinct from security loans, is seasonal in character, bankers see in it an encouraging note because of the reversal of the trend of the past few autumns.

Boston Wool Market Quotations Firm

"The wool market is very slow but quotations on domestic wools are nominally very firm. Mills have apparently pretty well covered their orders by purchases of wool made in the past eight weeks and now are buying only small lots to piece out stocks on hand. Foreign markets are being closely observed for signs of changing in the trend of values abroad. Cable reports to private concerns indicate prices in Australian and South American markets firmer than earlier in the week," says the Boston office of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Cranberry Crop Is This Year Larger

Massachusett a cranberry crop this year is expected to total 390,000 barrels compared with 370,000 barrels harvested in 1932. The present outlook for cranberries in the United States is for a crop totalling 879,000 barrels compared with 640,000 barrels harvested last year and 580,000 barrels, the five-year average 1926-1930.

Prices for Cigars Are Given a Boost

Wholesale prices on many leading five-cent cigars have been advanced an average of $1.50 a thousand to cover increased manufacturing costs. New prices generally are $40 a thousand, against previous price of $38.50, less usual discounts.

Beet Sugar Sales for Month Larger

United States beet sugar distribution for September amounted to 103,840 tons, raw sugar value, according to a report received by B. W. Dyer and Company, sugar economists and brokers, from the Domestic Sugar Bureau. This is an increase of 9756 tons compared with September, 1932.

Carloadings Gain Is Seen in Canada

Canadian carloadings during the week ended October 7 totaled 53,198, an increase of 1929 cars over the preceding week and a gain of 418 over the corresponding 1932 week, according to Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

COOK-COOS

By TED COOK

General Johnson shouldn't feel so discouraged. He's at least been able to keep Henry Ford silent.

Henry might feel different toward the code if the government would give him a concession to supply spare parts for administration steam rollers.

Aren't rare enough to make us care.

LOUISIANA MOON

"If this N.R.A. don't work I'll walk in and say, 'Mr. President, you said you were going to redistribute wealth and here's my plan.' And he'll do it."—Senator Huey Long.

Q. and A. DEPARTMENT

Dear Mme. Bella:

How would I find a congenial companion of the opposite sex in this great city whose interests are identical with mine—namely, literature and economics?

Stranger.

Milestone on the path to glory:

(Variety.)

NEW YORK—Declaring that the lyrics are too saucy for home piano or radio, Harms publishing house has turned back its rights to publish the songs in Mae West's forthcoming "I'm No Angel" picture.

BROOKLYN—Thirteen girls in the chorus of 24 playing at the Albee have quit their jobs to return to high school.

For gals mild as vanilla.

NEW YORK — Emily Darrell, platinum blonde, is back usherette ing for $18 a week at the Palace. Two weeks ago she accepted a job at three times her usherette salary to appear in a nite club floor show. She quit the floor show rather than wear the scanty costumes planned for her.

Cuties much too often singy
Songs like "Swingy Little Thingy."

News item says children no longer like to read the books especially written for them, but go for fiction meant for adults.

Ho-hum. Neither do adults like the books especially written for them. They go for the same fiction meant for children.

Smiles—

Righteous as a politician denying charges he knows are true.

Says Genevieve, the kitchen cynic: "American wives gotta lot to complain about, but it could be worse. What if they were all married to guys like Floyd Gibbons?"

WANTED—Unattached, jolly, capable woman to keep house on tiny farm. One cow to milk. Flowers and garden to tend. Small house. Plain cooking. Many inconveniences. Not much to eat. No automobile. Half mile from car line. Wages too small to mention, but lots of fun and a lifetime home if everybody is pleased. Box 18.

U.S. Agents Find Dope Gives Super-Speed or Death to Race Horses

Prescriptions Seized in Federal Campaign at Tracks Reveal Use of High-Powered Drugs

This is the third of a series of startling stories by Frank G. Menke revealing the scandalous, widespread "doping" of race horses. U. S. government agents, after a secret campaign of a year or more, have disclosed more than 60 arrests as a result of horses being given cocaine, heroin and other narcotics to increase their speed and give crooked "insiders" the opportunity to "clean up" in the pari-mutuels and betting rings of the country.

Other articles will be published daily in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser. Read them all.

By FRANK G. MENKE

New York, Oct. 14—When federal agents swooped down on the Arlington racetrack at Chicago, made arrests, seized bottles containing narcotics, syringes, measuring glasses and other paraphernalia used in drugging race horses, they also came into possession of "prescriptions" used to stimulate animals into frenzied speed.

Veterinarians who have seen these "prescriptions" and who know the effect of commingled narcotics within the organs of thoroughbreds were astounded because some of the potions did not appear deadly kill even those animals which were long used to them.

The "prescriptions," the preparations of trainers, or owners, perhaps suggested by unscrupulous horse doctors, contained different drugs in keeping with the individual idea as to which would drive an animal to super-speed.

One "prescription" called for the following:

Two ounces sweet syrup, 4 grains cocaine and ½ grain strychnine.

The directions, contrasting with the general ones, usually instruct much earlier administration of dope, read: "Give as soon as leaves for post."

HORSES FALL DEAD

Another dose was:

3 ounces kola nut, 1½ grains heroin, ¼ grain strychnine, 5 drops digitalis and 3 drops nitroglycerin.

Horses race and fall dead during the running; others race and drop dead after the race. One track veterinarian verdict usually includes something about a "weak heart." Perhaps this dose, found among the "prescriptions" seized at Arlington, accounts for the "weak heart":

8 grains cocaine, ½ grain strychnine, ¼ grain heroin, 2 ounces kola nut and 2½ ounces nitroglycerin.

No directions accompanied the above.

A veterinarian, taking note of the huge amount of cocaine, the tremendous dosage of nitroglycerin, and the half grain of strychnine, concluded that if administered at one time, or for any one race, it would kill every horse alive. So perhaps this mixture was intended for two different horses on the same day—or for consecutive-day doses for the same horse.

SUPER-SPEED GIVEN

Another of the seized "prescriptions" read:

Four to five grains cocaine, one ounce alcohol and three ounces syrup.

"Mike's Hop," which was guaranteed to make a feeble, ancient horse run with the blazing speed of a champion, called for 14 grains cocaine, 3 grain heroin, 1 ounce digitalis, 1 ounce strophanthus (a powerful heart stimulant) and 2 ounces of kola nut. No directions accompanied this, but it probably was to serve for two races, or two horses.

Obviously, the temperature has something to do with the functioning of some "prescriptions." Here is one which instructed, "Give full dose 50 minutes before race on hot days, 40 minutes before race on cold days," and read: 5 grains cocaine, 1½ grains heroin, ¼ grain strychnine, ½ ounce extract ginger and 3 ounces Kola Nut.

The Kola Nut, so frequently used in the "prescriptions," is a very mild stimulant, perhaps equal in effect to caffeine or alcohol, and is used in conjunction with the high powered drugs chiefly because it is good neutralizing fluid.

TWO METHODS USED

Among the very mildest of the "prescriptions" was:

Two ounces Kola Nut, 1½ grains heroin, ¼ grain strychnine, 2 drops nitroglycerin and 5 drops digitalis.

These liquid "prescriptions" used in doping are administered by two methods: direct injection into the blood stream with a hypodermic needle through a vein in the neck, or by squirting, via syringe, into side of mouth between teeth and back teeth, holding the animal's head high in the air until he swallows the dose that may make him live a short life, or may be easily send him to his death with an over-stimulated heart.

Sound Americanism

Resolutions Adopted by Legion

Senators and Representatives in Congress should "read, mark, and inwardly digest" the resolutions recently adopted by the American Legion in national convention assembled concerning the course of American foreign policy and the needs of the national defense.

These resolutions reiterate the unconditional opposition of the Legion to the entrance of the United States into the League of Nations, either through the front door of the Covenant or the trap door of the League Court.

The Legion further resolved against any cancellation of Europe's war debts to the United States and against any weakening by treaty or otherwise of the safeguards this Government has set up against any immigration from Asia and against unrestricted immigration from any other part of the world.

These warning words of the Legion serve timely notice upon the United States Senate that public sentiment in this country is overwhelmingly against any departure from our traditional foreign policy or any weakening of existing safeguards against alien immigration.

No less timely is the Legion's call upon both Houses of Congress to discharge their constitutional obligation "to provide for the common defense."

This, as the Legion sets forth in its declaration of principles, can only be done by authorizing and appropriating for defense forces afield and afloat that will include:

FIRST—A Navy equal to the strongest in every class of combatant ship, with men to man it.

SECOND—An Army of 14,000 officers and 165,000 men, mechanized and motorized to meet the most modern standard.

THIRD—A National Guard of 210,000 reinforced by an organized reserve of 120,000, officers' and citizens' military training camps providing training for 50,000 men annually.

This program for national defense has the approval of our highest military, naval and aviation authorities. It is a program for defense. It is a program that ought to command the support of both political parties in the two Houses of Congress.

If the Roosevelt Administration will make the resolutions of the Legion regarding foreign policy and the national defense the basis of its future recommendations to Congress, the public sentiment voiced by the Legion will compel the Congress to support the leadership of the President in keeping America free from foreign entanglements and armed against foreign aggression.

Will Fight Drug Traffic

U. S. Attorney Ford Makes Pledge

Francis J. W. Ford, the new United States Attorney, announces the policies he will pursue as the chief law officer of the United States government for Massachusetts.

Mr. Ford makes one definite pledge which will particularly interest the public. He promises speedy and unrelenting prosecution of the evil persons who engage in the despicable traffic in habit-forming drugs.

"An awful toll of human life is claimed by the traffic of narcotic drugs," he says, "and society has paid a terrific price for it."

Mr. Ford is exactly right.

The drug traffic debases morals, destroys human life and visits anguish upon the family of the unfortunate and helpless addict.

In all the calendar of crime there is none quite like it in the misery it effects and the long, torturous suffering it imposes upon its victims. It feasts upon human weakness. It thrives upon the moral, mental and physical depravity of human beings.

If Mr. Ford, in the enthusiasm of the high honors that have come to him, will resolutely carry out his pledge against this miserable dope traffic, good people everywhere will say, "God bless you; and may success attend your efforts."

What Is Needed Here

The Chinese Virtue of Honesty

Professor Francis B. Sayre says the world needs some of the virtues of the Chinese, notably their patience, perseverance and industry.

It is true that the world could absorb one of their qualities and be the better off for it. That is the quality of common honesty. When a banker steals a million dollars over there, they do not elect him to a board of college trustees. They shave his head and let water fall upon it, a drop at a time, until each succeeding drop seems to gather the force of a piledriver, and he dies.

If their perseverance and industry are of the type that allows thousands of Chinese to die annually from famine in a land that could be rich and abundant, the Chinese are welcome to THAT.

If their patience is of the type that keeps them defenseless generation after generation and allows some little Nation, one-seventh their population, to come in and grab their territory, the Chinese are welcome to THAT, too.

We might well afford to acquire their virtue and allow them to retain their other qualities to themselves.

More Autos, Better Times

Automobile registration has made a decided increase in Massachusetts over last year.

More cars on the road means only one thing. More people have the money to buy and operate them.

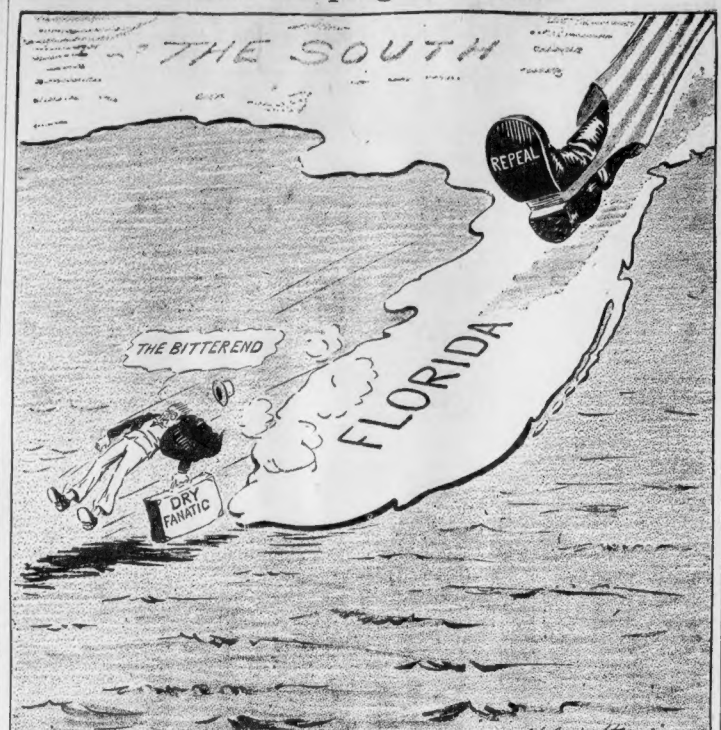
You hear a great deal about car-loadings, postal receipts and electric consumption as barometers of business.

They all are good barometers, and they all have made sharp and satisfactory increases.

But when you see new cars on the highways, either for business or pleasure, and when you know that people are now taking cars out of their garages, licensing them and putting them on the roadways, you just know that the business improvement is widespread.

There is nothing that makes a man feel more independent than to own and operate his own automobile.

The Jumping Off Place



Wagner 'The Right Man In the Right Place'

By James T. Williams, Jr.

Under Mr. Wagner's chairmanship, the board has already to its credit important victories in the field of conciliation, adjustment and arbitration.

A recent example of the promptness with which the board acts, the fairness with which it rules, and the influence which its counsel carries is to be found in the dispute between the air transport operators and the air transport pilots over the hours and wages.

PILOTS' DISPUTE

But for swift intervention by the national labor board this dispute would have quickly forced a general pilots' strike as a protest against the unwillingness of the operators to accept the services of Senator Wagner and his board.

A general pilots' strike would have stopped passenger and express traffic on the Federal airways, wasted thousands of dollars of public money invested in government assistance to air transport, and dealt a hard blow to the air transport industry and the development of commercial aviation.

The trouble between the pilots and the operators started in a dispute over the proposed national recovery act code for the air transport industry.

As originally drafted, this code provided for a minimum salary for pilots far below what they earn at present, and for a maximum of flying time far above that fixed by the Aero-medical Association as the safety limit.

After long and increasingly acrimonious discussions, the pilots, on the ground that they were entitled to consideration as professional men, not as laborers, obtained their exclusion from the pay and hours provision of the code.

But before the introduction of the code for consideration by the national recovery administration, disputes had arisen between air transport executives and representatives of the air line pilots over the question of pilots' salaries.

While willing to accept a cut in base pay, the pilots insisted that they should be paid according to the miles they flew.

Operators, on the other hand, as a matter of increasing economy of operation as faster airplanes were placed in service, proposed to pay their pilots by the flying hour.

This dispute was pending when the hearings on the code started. It was then agreed by both sides, as the pilots believed, to drop the dispute until the code for the air transport industry had been signed.

Then the five major air lines served notice on their pilots that within a week a new pay scale for them would go into effect, providing for pay at a reduced rate.

This the pilots believed to be a breach of faith and promptly appealed to the National Labor Board, stating that they would not work under the new pay scale. As chairman of the board, Senator Wagner did not waver. He acted without hesitation.

Under his leadership, the board promptly assumed jurisdiction and requested the operators to withdraw the pay scale until there could be arbitration.

Instead of acceding at first to this request, the air lines issued an announcement that the new pay scale would go into effect on midnight, October 1.

WAGNER'S PROGRAM

Again the chairman of the board acted swiftly. After a conference with a representative of the pilots, Senator Wagner obtained their promise that the pilots would continue to work until the board could hold a hearing on the question.

Four days later a hearing was held. It was attended by representatives of the air lines and of the pilots.

After listening to both sides of the case for three hours, the National Labor Board, with Senator Wagner in the chair, presented a program acceptable to both sides.

The pay question will be arbitrated. But first a "fact-finding committee" composed of one pilot, one air-line executive and an impartial member to be appointed by Senator Wagner, as chairman, would make a study of everything relating to pilots' pay.

Public sentiment supports fair and fearless leadership of the sort which Senator Wagner, as chairman of the National Labor Board, has raised up in the settlement of disputes of this sort between wage earners and wage payers.

New York Day by Day

Dream's End

NEW YORK, Oct. 14—Recently my wife acquired title to a pleasantly perched brick house on the block where she spent her girlhood and a block from the frame cottage of my juvenile years. A first remembrance of her was skipping a rope on the brick pavement in front of this residence.

O. O. McIntyre

She was in blue pinafore with pulled taffy braids and I was driving behind old Bob Charley in the family surrey with grandma. So it is a sentimental acquisition. Likely we shall never live there. But to me it will be "our home." Every couple has a fanciful wishing for a "Dream's End."

This Ohio town is elbowed in the swift sparkle of a river bend. It has not grown much since we went away. Several trains thus chug through daily are about all that keep in touch with a straining world.

* * *

Every city man almost, I presume, day dreams of becoming "a country gentleman," a plump-cheeked squire with plenty of jumpers, rows of kennels and a few dusty flagons of heady old Port. It's cheerful contemplation. I indulge many times after the harassing 24 hours of a city's furore. Yet it's only nursing. I know my sentimental nexus to the small town would snap if I lived in one.

* * *

The many things that made the small town glamorous for so many are no more. It is now 1 a. m. in New York. A damp, pearly fog is rolling up from the bay. Out of the window street lights are furry yellowish blobs. The Autumnal chill brings its touch of melancholy and train of reveries. In the gathering mist I may fashion many scenes dear to all. I see Miss Gatewood, the public school teacher, and her pitch pronge. And I see Cora Dodge, who lived across the tracks and whose skirts always gapped in the back.

* * *

Other scenes coil up with the mistral: The leaning ticket-taker on the merry-go-round . . . the fascinating flare of medicine show torches . . . a dove acting crippled to lure boys from her nest . . . the wiry little mare, Myrt, picking up as she was turned toward Taylor's livery barn . . . the band in the park tussling with an "introduction" . . . ox-blood shoes . . . "Lucille has the seven year itch" chalked on the . . . .

* * *

And: Captain Jenkins, with an empty sleeve from Shiloh . . . the sputter of frying catfish at Hud Faudree's . . . Zim's "Weary Willies" in Puck . . . the bent pin anglers along the vehement chuckle that is Chicamaugua creek . . . Mr. Wetherholt, the undertaker, and his milk-white horses . . . the harvester's water jug in the haycock . . . Monk Welch, the hostler . . . The fellow who loafed the summer away "waiting a telegram from Cincinnati" . . . The dead bull snake run over by a farm wagon . . . a Saturday hill-billy band from West Virginia . . . the running conversation between two house painters . . . Dr. Thompson's Magic Eye Salve . . . Henry Books . . . Talk of a public library . . . Frost's washes of New England.

These seemingly inconsequentials, very tissue of life, rivet us to the home town. But they vanish—just as this fog will go with the morning sun. No one loving his birthplace should return after leaving permanently. One goes back to find the rainbowy idealism a mirage—a total stranger in an utterly alien land. And that's something of a heart wrench!

Just Folks

Indifference

He planted roses in the spring
And watched them come to blossoming.
Much as a mother's lovely smile
Their beauty charmed him for awhile.
But June went by and came the days
Of summer with the world ablaze
And to the casual bloom or two
Indifferent and aloof he grew.

The perfect blooms of June he'd known
And claimed their beauty for his own,
But tiring stem and thinning leaf
Tested his love and proved it brief.
Had he but walked the plot around
Weeds and wild shoots his eyes had found
And just a little thought and care
Had kept his roses thriving there.

Indifference and neglect remain
Great fountain heads of human pain.
'Tis well enough in days of spring
To claim the first fresh blossoming,
But hearts and roses both require
Devotion as they age and tire.
All that is joyous swiftly goes
To weeds when man indifferent grows.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Faith Isn't a Fairy Tale

TOUGH TIMES, these! So many us fighting with our backs to the wall. Perhaps you're in a jamb like that — battling on hopelessly, and nothing to battle with. Home, money, job all gone. Health failing. Utterly discouraged. How's a man to fight without weapons?

Elsie Robinson

But you have a weapon! Bankrupt though you may be, you have the strongest weapon on earth at your command. You have—FAITH.

You laugh at that, don't you? A bitter, angry laugh.

"Faith? That's the bank!" you cry. "A lot of religious hooey. Faith is all right if you haven't anything really the matter with you. But what good is faith in a mess like this? Faith won't feed me, will it? Or get me a new job? Or cure my sick baby? Faith! Maybe you get a kick out of preaching stuff like that, but it's cruel to talk such fairy tales when people are up against it."

Yes, I know. I've been up against it, too, and I said just what you are saying now. But I was wrong—and so are you.

Faith isn't a fairy tale. Faith isn't "religious hooey." It has nothing to do with religion—or even with righteousness. Bad people can and do use Faith quite as successfully as good people. For Faith is simply a normal function of our minds which can be made to work as practically, and as powerfully, as any other function of our bodies.

Memory and Faith are both invisible teachings. There are certain definite steps toward remembering. You don't realize you use them; but wise men, who study the mind, have mapped them out. When you want to remember something, this is what you do.

Some need in you urges you to remember something.

Instantly your mind turns back toward remembering that one certain thing. It begins searching—begins rejecting all other memories—goes on doggedly looking, looking, certain that the thing it wants is there. Suddenly—perhaps in a split second; perhaps after long hours—your mind presents you with the picture or the fact you want.

That's how memory works. And Faith works in much the same way. Faith isn't an aimless, emotional hocus-pocus. It, too, has definite steps which you must observe.

FIRST—You must decide what you want to get, just as you decided what you wanted to remember.

SECOND—You must feel that it's practical and possible to get that thing; that it is within the range of your personal handling. There's no sense in making a lot of cock-eyed demands, and then beating because you can't get them. There are certain things which belong in your life—certain things you can handle, and other certain things which you can't. Decide that the thing you want is possible for you and right for you.

THIRD—Having decided this, put all other desires and doubts out of your head. Go after that thing you want, as your mind went after that memory. Go after it doggedly, unfalteringly. Use all ingenuity—every practical help within your power. But don't depend on those outward gestures to do the trick. The real power lies in your own mental aim. Keep that aim unfaltering.

THE THING YOU NEED—THE THING YOU HAVE A RIGHT TO—IS WAITING FOR YOU. GO GET IT!

And you CAN get it!

With what?

WITH THE WEAPON LIFE MADE FOR THAT PURPOSE. WITH FAITH!

One of Scotland Yard's Greatest Man-Hunters Retires—The Crippen Case

By Edwin C. Hill

The world's greatest man-hunter is giving up the hunt. Forty years of his life have been given to it. For 40 years he combed the underworld of London. He brought to justice hundreds of the world's most notorious criminals. He looked upon the naked, cringing soul of the murderer as the judge pronounced sentence of doom. The curtain they called down upon him passed over his head. The thought of their fate never disturbed his sleep at night. For they were the enemies of society. He was a hound of the law. He sets forth the record of his career in a book just published by Doubleday Doran.

The title is "Man Hunters of Scotland Yard." The author is Arthur Fowler Neil, for two score years one of the chief detectives of the great police center of London. The book bristles with thrills. Through its pages troop an endless crowd of murderers and burglars, thieves, confidence men and imposters, forgers and fences. Neil is a detective of the old school. He has little use for modern methods of crime detection. America, France and Germany, he says, make specialists of their men. They stick chemistry, surgery, toxicology and pathology into them. But they don't teach them what the British school of sleuths—a knowledge of human nature.

There is something in what Superintendent Neil has to say about the old-fashioned methods he favors. They certainly bring results. The two major factors responsible for keeping down crime in England are the good work of Scotland Yard and the swift work of the courts. It is no unusual event for a murderer in England to be tried, convicted and hanged within four weeks of the commission of his crime. To the average American visiting London, Scotland Yard might easily pass unnoticed. It is a dingy, gaunt, red building, standing well back from the Thames embankment, with uniformed policemen on duty outside its gates. Actually, it is one of the world's greatest institutions devoted to the detection of crime. There is one case to which Superintendent Neil makes no reference in his book, although it attracted more worldwide attention than all of the others put together.

It was the Crippen murder case. Dr. Hawley H. Crippen was an American doctor, who had received his degree in Cleveland, and had practiced in New York, Detroit and San Diego, California. He went to London as the representative of a famous firm of patent medicines. His wife, a native of Brooklyn who had once been known on the stage as Belle Elmore, disappeared suddenly, and Dr. Crippen gave out that she had died in a small town in continental Europe. The suspicions of Scotland Yard were aroused by a letter from America, written by a friend of the former actress—Mme. Ginette, a vaudeville performer who had an equestrian act for which she trained horses at Roselle, New Jersey. She was an intimate friend of Belle Elmore, and she had never liked Dr. Crippen. When she heard that his wife had died, she suspected something was wrong and wrote her suspicions to the English police.

Crippen was questioned and admitted that his statement was a lie. He added, however, a story which was plausible enough. He told Scotland Yard that he and his wife had quarrelled and that she had left him and sailed for America. Fear of gossip and its effect on his business caused him, he said, to give out the story of her death. Strangely enough, the keen brains of Scotland Yard were tricked. They apparently believed the story. And three days later, when they returned to question Crippen, the bland doctor had gone and with him had disappeared Ethel Leneve, a young woman who had been his secretary.

Further investigation revealed the remains of the doctor's wife, buried in the cellar of the house in London, where they had lived. It was the chief inspector of Scotland Yard who had personally questioned the doctor and who had accepted his statements to the extent of permitting him to retain his freedom. The centuries-old reputation of Scotland Yard was at stake and every available detective was let loose on the case.

The hunt went on and seemed doomed to failure . . . It remained for the captain of a Canadian ship in mid-ocean to find the fugitives. Capt. Kendall, of the Canadian Pacific Steamship Montrose, from Antwerp to Montreal, had cast a sharp eye on two of his passengers, listed as John Robinson and son. They boarded the ship at Antwerp, and the boy never left the company of his father. Most of their time aboard they spent in secluded parts of the ship.

The skipper had them watched and soon concluded that the pair were none other than the missing Dr. Crippen and his companion, Ethel Leneve, the girl disguised as a boy. Captain Kendall notified his home office, and when the ship reached Montreal, a chief inspector of Scotland Yard, who had come over on a faster ship, was waiting at the dock. Scotland Yard had failed, but the swift moving of English justice was again demonstrated. As the prisoners were being taken to Quebec, for arraignment, a New York reporter asked the detective:

"What do you suppose will happen to Dr. Crippen when they get him back?" "Oh," replied the policeman, "they'll hang him about the holidays."

It was then mid-autumn. They hanged Dr. Crippen in the week between Christmas and New Year's. Once more Scotland Yard had got its man.
